Recycling building gets new design

■ Much smaller plan omits office; bids set for November

By Frank Boyett

The Tri-County Recycling Alliance has drastically reduced the size of its planned new processing facility and is preparing for a new round of bids after the first ones came in higher than anticipated. The building was originally designed at 27,000 square feet, with 2,000 square feet of office area, but the lowest of eight bids submitted was $1.6 million. The revised plans call for a building of only 18,000 square feet. “We took the office area out of it,” said Henderson Mayor Steve Austin. “We’ll make other arrangements for that. It’s still adequate for doing the recycling job.

We hope to put that back out for bid Oct. 12,” with a bid-opening scheduled for mid-November. “We made some structural changes, too,” said Henderson County Judge-executive Hugh McCormick. The building was first designed with no interior support columns, he noted, but those have been added to lessen the need for robust building footers and the amount of structural steel across the top of the building. “It was an open span, but that was just too cost prohibitive,” McCormick said. “It’ll still be as good as it was, but with the posts going in the middle we can eliminate some of the other work that was going to have to go into it.” The front wall of the new building design will allow for future expansion. Other changes involved deleting a permanent loading dock; the agency will rely instead on movable steel docks. “If we build (a permanent dock) now and get ready to add onto the building it would be in the way,” McCormick said. The recycling alliance has $900,000 in grant money to as-

FDA warning public online pharmacies can be a risk

By Linda A. Johnson
Associated Press

The Food and Drug Administration is warning U.S. consumers that the vast majority of Internet pharmacies are fraudulent and likely are selling counterfeit drugs that could harm them.

The agency on Friday launched a national campaign, called BeSafeRx, to alert the public to the danger, amid evidence that more people are shopping for their medicine online, looking for savings and convenience.

Instead, they’re likely to get fake drugs that are contaminated, are past their expiration date or contain no active ingredient, the wrong amount of active ingredient or even toxic substances such as arsenic and rat poison. They could sicken or kill people, cause them to develop a resistance to their real medicine, cause new side effects or trigger harmful interactions with other medications being taken.

“Our goal is to increase awareness,” FDA Commissioner Dr. Margaret Hamburg told The Associated Press, “not to scare people away from online pharmacies. We want them to use appropriate pharmacies.”

That means pharmacies that are located in the U.S., are licensed by the pharmacy board in the patient’s state and have a licensed pharmacist available to answer questions. In addition, the pharmacy must require a valid doctor’s prescription for the medicine. Online drugstores that claim none is needed, or that the site’s doctor can write a prescription after the customer answers some questions, are breaking the law.

Research by the National Association of Boards of Pharmacy, which represents the state pharmacy boards, found that of thousands of online pharmacies it reviewed, only about 3 percent follow state and federal laws. In fact, the group’s website lists only a few dozen Internet pharmacies that it has verified are legitimate and following the rules.

Most consumers don’t know that. An Internet survey, conducted by the FDA in May, questioned 6,090 adults. It found that nearly one in four Internet shoppers has bought prescription drugs online, and nearly three in 10 said they weren’t confident they

New drug law’s tests expensive

■ Some facing hardship when insurance refuses to pay costs

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Under a new law designed to curb prescription pill abuse, patients with long-term conditions requiring controlled substances have to submit to urine drug tests that aren’t always covered by insurance companies. Retired nurse Cynthia Burton told the Lexington Herald-Leader that her insurer, Bluegrass Family Health, declined to pay $533 for a urine test that her husband took to get his anxiety medicine because it wasn’t medically necessary. She said she hasn’t yet gotten a letter about her urine test for insomnia medicine, but expects the same result. “We’re both retired, so it’s a lot of money,” said Burton. “What I don’t like is that, under this law, we’re considered guilty until proven innocent. “We’re having to prove our innocence at considerable expense.” Gov. Steve Beshear said he is “aware of the concerns” and understands the cost may be “prohibitive” for some patients. He says officials are working to find a solution to the problem. “We are working with the Kentucky Board of Medical Licensure to re-

Accuride CEO featured speaker at chamber’s industry breakfast

Special to The Gleaner

The Henderson Chamber of Commerce will honor the best of the community’s industrial, manufacturing and large-scale firms at the Industry of the Year Award breakfast next month. The event will begin at 7:30 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 18, at the Henderson Country Club. Rick Dauch, president and CEO of Evansville-based Accuride Corp., will be the featured speaker. “We’re honored to have Rick share Accuride’s experience weathering the economy of the last three years,” chamber President Brad Schneider said. “Perhaps no company with operations in Henderson is more familiar with the ups and downs of the manufacturing environment in the U.S., so I’m sure Rick’s message will be one to which all members of our local industrial sector can relate.” Dauch joined Accuride in February 2011. Before that, he served as president and CEO of Acument Global Technologies, a 2,500-employee firm which made fasteners for the aerospace and defense, automotive, heavy truck, industrial and nonautomotive transportation industries. Before that Dauch worked in varied capacities at American Axle & Manufacturing and also United Technologies Carrier Division. His corporate career was preceded by his service as an officer in the Army beginning in 1983, concluding with his assignment as a Light Infantry Company Commander with the 10th Mountain Division at Fort Drum, NY. Dauch was also qualified as an Airborne-Ranger and expert infantryman. Dauch earned dual master’s degrees in management and engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a bachelor’s degree in engineering from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, where he was a four-year football letterman and Rhodes Scholar candidate. The cost to attend is $12 for chamber members, $18 for nonmembers and includes a buffet breakfast. For reservations, contact the chamber at 826-9531 or

Man fatally shoots self on TV after Arizona chase

By Bob Christie and David Bauder
Associated Press

PHOENIX — A man fatally shot himself in the head Friday on live national television at the end of a high-speed carjacking chase that began in Phoenix and ended about 90 minutes later within 80 miles of the California border.

Fox News was covering the chase that began about midday using a live helicopter shot from Phoenix affiliate KSAZ-TV. The man driving a copper-colored four-door sedan stopped, ran into the desert and placed a handgun to his head and fired.

The man was declared dead at the scene and hasn’t yet been identified, according to Sgt. Tommy Thompson, a Phoenix police spokesman.

Fox News anchor Shepard Smith told viewers that the video was supposed to be on a 10-second delay so it could be cut off from airing if something went awry.

“We really messed up, and we’re all very sorry,” Smith said.

Fox apologized for showing the violence on air.

“We took every precaution to avoid any such live incident by putting the helicopter pictures on a five second delay,” said Michael Clemente, executive vice president of news editorial. “Unfortunately, this mistake was the result of a severe human error and we apologize for what viewers ultimately saw on the screen.”

More frequently than its rivals, Fox News Channel picks up car chases from its local affiliates and airs them live. It’s gripping television, a live mystery with no clear resolution, and often provides a short-term ratings boost as viewers tune in to see how it ends. Critics say the chases themselves rarely rise to the level of national news. The Phoenix station was not airing the chase live when it ended.

Thompson said the man allegedly stole a car from a couple at gunpoint outside a Phoenix restaurant just before 11 a.m. MST.

Police officers located the vehicle and began a pursuit and the man fired several shots, Thompson said. He said the shots hit the police vehicle and the officers escaped injury.

The suspect headed west on Interstate 10, then pulled onto a dirt road that Thompson said was “70 to 80 miles east of the California line.”

“He got out of the car and shot himself,” Thompson said. “Efforts to revive him were not successful and he was dead at the scene. We don’t have an ID yet.”

Wreck delays bridge traffic

Gleaner staff

A Henderson man was treated and released from Methodist Hospital on Friday after an early morning accident on the southbound side of the U.S. 41 bridge that caused a traffic delay of at least 30 minutes.

According to the Henderson County Sheriff’s Office, Robert Pirtle, 26, West Grant Street, was driving his 1991 GMC Sonoma pickup on the bridge when he lost control on the wet roadway around 5:50 a.m.

Police said his vehicle began fishtailing and he was unable to get it under control before it struck the right side of the concrete barrier wall and then overturned.

The pickup came to rest on its driver side in the right-hand lane of the road.

Police said Pirtle suffered a laceration to his right elbow and was transported to the hospital by private vehicle.

Henderson man critical after late-night accident

Gleaner staff

A Henderson man was listed in critical condition at St. Mary’s Medical Center Friday after a late-night vehicle accident in Henderson County Thursday.

According to the Kentucky State Police, Corey Durke, 26, was driving a 2005 Chevrolet Monte Carlo west on Bluff City-Spottsville Road at 11:25 p.m. when, for unknown reasons, his vehicle left the road, overturned and came to final rest on its top.

Police officer accused of sexting

LA GRANGE, Ky. — A police officer has been charged with sending sexually explicit text messages to a juvenile.

The Oldham County Police Department says in a news release that Officer Shane Mosley resigned after being charged with using electronic means to induce a minor to engage in sexual or other prohibited activities; official misconduct; and third degree unlawful transaction with a minor.

According to online fiscal court minutes, Mosley had been an officer with the county since 2008.

He was lodged in the Oldham County Jail and released on $1,000 bond.

New spending record could be set for lobbying this year in Kentucky

■ More than $13.2 million spent since January

By Roger Alford
Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Tobacco companies were among a growing list of businesses and organizations that are on track to set a new spending record this year for lobbying Frankfort lawmakers. Legislative Ethics Commission attorney John Schaaf said Friday more than $13.2 million has been spent since January. He projected the total could top $17 million by year's end, slightly more than the current record of $16.9 million spent in 2008.

"It's just more of the trend that we've seen in recent years of higher spending on lobbying," Schaaf said. Businesses and other organizations that have lobbyists in Frankfort are required to file periodic spending reports with the Legislative Ethics Commission. Those reports show that an increasing number of Kentucky businesses and other organizations have opted to keep lobbyists on staff in hopes of influencing legislation that affects them. Most of the spending occurs early in the year, when lawmakers are in session. But Schaaf said many of the companies reported expenditures in excess of $30,000 each over the past four months. "If you go back to 1994, when we first started keeping these records, a total of about $6.5 million was spent on lobbying," Schaaf said. "Now, 18 years later, we're probably going over $17 million. That's approaching three times as much as what was spent 18 years ago." The spending records show businesses and their lobbyists spent about $4.4 million over the past four months in Frankfort. The Kentucky Chamber of Commerce was the top spender at $95,906. Altria Client Services, parent company of cigarette-maker Philip Morris USA Inc., was second at $90,967. Other big spenders included Peabody Energy, Humana, National Tobacco Co., and the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation. In the first four months of this year, lobbyists and their employers spent more money to influence lawmakers than in any legislative session in Kentucky history. The total topped $8.8 million, most of which was wages paid directly to the lobbyists by their employers.

HCHS free fall concert set Monday

Gleaner staff

Come on out to the Henderson Fine Arts Center on Monday to hear the Henderson County High School Choral Department present its free fall concert at 6:30 p.m. in McCormick Hall. Musical selections by John Rutter, Jean Berger, Irving Berlin, John Legend and Casey/Jacobs will be included in the performance. The choir will also give the audience a preview of the music it will perform with actor Neil Patrick Harris in two Disney Candle Light Processions on Nov. 29. The Candlelight Processional will be held in Epcot in the American Gardens Theater. Meanwhile, the fall concert will end with a preview from the choir's Spring Musical 2013, "Les Miserables." All three choirs — Chamber, Concert and Show — will perform separately as well as combined as the Colonel Choir. Choirs include students in grades 9-12 and are under the direction of director Felicia Belcher and student teacher Sarah Kendall. They are accompanied by Emily Mushlock. At the performance, students selected for the Kentucky Chapter of the American Choral Directors Associational Jr. High Honor Choir and students selected for the Quad-State Senior High Honor Choir will be recognized. The Kentucky Chapter of the American Choral Directors Associational Jr. High Honor Choir students are Emma Bowden, Shaylee Morris and Shyla Zavala, and the Quad-State Senior High Honor Choir members are Caleb Price, Adam Smith, Chris Rogers, Tori Hester, Breeanna Cox, Ally Vanover, Alexis Floyd, B.J. Mosley, Beth McLeod, Kaelin Hildreth, Jeremy Arnett, Collin Mayes and Farley Norman. While the concert is free, donations are always accepted. For more information, contact Felicia Belcher, Director of Choral Activities at Henderson County High School, at 831-8876, or felicia.belcher@henderson.kyschools.us.

Ohio Valley offering after-hours customer support

By Chuck Stinnett
cstinnett@thegleaner.com
270-831-8343

Ohio Valley Financial Group has announced that it will be offering after-hours customer phone service for both its banking and insurance customers. From 5 to 8 p.m. weeknights, customers can call OV's main number at 831-1500 and speak to a local bank employee to check account balances, inquire about loan payoff amounts, change passwords, confirm whether a check went through or make other inquiries.

"You can do about anything you need to do," OV spokeswoman Lyndsey Womack said. If the representative can't address the question, bank officers will be on call to contact the customer that evening she said.

The intent, Womack said, is to provide customers with a 12-hour window — from 8 a.m., when offices open, until 8 p.m. — in which customers, particularly those whose workdays don't end until 5 p.m., can contact the bank and secure information or resolve a problem.

Officially, the service launches this Monday evening. However, the bank has been offering the after-hour phone service for the past 90 days as part of a test that was announced only on its website and to bank employees. During that period, the bank received 400 evening phone calls, Womack said.

The service is available for customers of its Henderson and Evansville offices. The evening phone service won't be available on holidays when the bank is closed.

Owner Jerry Whitney told The Daily News he and his wife were planning to move the business to another building. They had hoped to use money from the final day of sale to pay their first month's rent at a new location.

William L. Scheyer, President, Vision 2015 Northern Kentucky visitor impressed with Henderson

I visited Henderson last week at the invitation of Herb McKee, who invited me to speak to the current class of the Henderson Leadership Initiative. I'm writing you, as editor of The Gleaner, to say how impressed I am with Henderson.

I'd been to your town years ago when I was a city administrator in Northern Kentucky. I had forgotten what a nice city you have. I stayed last week at the L&N Bed and Breakfast and had a lovely time. The Priests are truly gracious hosts, and my stay was very enjoyable. One of the many nice moments was spent sitting on their patio reading The Gleaner.

I'm happy to say that I feel my meetings with not only the current leadership class, but also with a group of community leaders at a dinner meeting the night before, were not only pleasant, but productive, as well. Even though there's a size difference between Henderson and Northern Kentucky, it was interesting to see how many of the same community issues we share.

In closing, let me say that from the pleasant streets, nice riverfront park and especially the welcoming people, I had a great time during my too brief visit to Henderson. As editor of your paper, I just wanted to let you know how your town appeared to a visitor.

Samantha Crowley, Henderson 'Thumbs up' crusade brings attention to juvenile cancer

I'm very proud of the outpouring of attention for Lane Goodwin, the 13-year-old boy from McLean County who has raised attention for childhood cancer with his "thumbs-up" campaign.

The Gleaner has printed pictures from people showing their support (at a Colonels game, the courthouse and others). Our work even took a picture to be posted on his Facebook page.

This story touches me a bit closer to my heart than maybe others.

Last year at the end of November, my son's half-brother, Blaze, died of leukemia. He was only 10 years old.

Much of Lane's story mimics Blaze's. Blaze was diagnosed with leukemia in 2008, was treated for about a year, then was fine for two years. Then he relapsed and cancer went to his brain. From the time doctors found it to the time he passed was only a very few short months.

I wish the Goodwin family all the luck getting through this time. I hope Lane gets all the Facebook wishes that he is wanting.

Also, I tried writing to The Gleaner and agencies, TV news and others for help and support for the family of Blaze when he was sick and passed away.

However, I never received any attention for him. I'm thankful that Lane is bringing attention to childhood cancer. Many people who have never thought about it before are now talking about it.

The UN General Assembly affords me the opportunity to address a critical global constituency...

Russ Brown, Henderson It's high noon: Time for showdown with Obama

It's high noon.

Emergencies have always been necessary to progress. It was the darkness which produced the lamp. It was fog that produced the compass. It was hunger that drove us to exploration, and it took a depression to teach us the real value of a job.

There are far too many able-bodied people in this United States who live without attempting to work.

Folks, Obama does not have your back even though he tries to sell himself as the great provider and healer. This past almost four years should be ever so convincing that he is not.

Instead, if things are going good, he wants the credit. However, if it's turning sour, it's someone else's fault.

Mr. Obama in my opinion is the Benedict Arnold of this American era. He has all but destroyed our credibility around the world. The news media could easily expose this threat, instead they choose to cover it up. Why?

During the Cold War period, Premier Nikita Khrushchev of the Soviet Union stood before the world and stated the United States would be destroyed from within.

Is Obama the chosen one assigned to accomplish this mission?

It appears to me an elaborate plan has been formulated to control our energy, religion, military and destroy the Constitution of this nation.

These four areas will be all it takes to accomplish what Mr. Khrushchev precisely predicted.

It's "High Noon" (a 1953 movie starring the late Gary Cooper) and come this November, I pray Mitt Romney plays the role of Gary Cooper in this showdown. Think and wisely choose what could be our last hope.

Aveena Patel and Katelin Coursey Colonels' Corner Bank public relations officers Advertising key to Colonels' Corner Bank's success

On Sept. 13, the Colonels' Corner Bank, a student-run bank at Henderson County High School, had its Grand Opening for the 2012-2013 school year.

First started 16 years ago, the student bank has been cashing checks, opening savings accounts and granting loans for students, teachers and staff.

What made this year stand out among recent years was their record-breaking numbers.

On the opening day alone, the bank had 45 transactions and 32 people opened savings accounts with the student bank. Also, within a week of opening, the bank has already granted a loan for one of its members.

The Colonels' Corner Bank public relations and marketing teams worked to increase advertising by appearing on the Colonel Cast, a student news broadcast at the school, and creating a commercial that informed students of the services of the bank and introduced all 26 members of the banking staff.

Executive administrative assistants and all members of the bank also helped to advertise by decorating the halls of the school with billboards and signs promoting the Grand Opening.

The 2012-2013 Colonels' Corner Bank is looking forward to another wonderful year providing banking services for its school.

GUEST COLUMN

Romney's view of the poor will cost him election

By James L. Hartley

We're often told that the rich got rich because they're smarter with money than the poor.

Earlier this year, a group of wealthy citizens shelled out $50,000 each to have a meal with Republican candidate Mitt Romney. This, by the way, is roughly the same as the median income in this country — meaning half of Americans make $50,000 or less a year. So, since the rich are so smart with their money, what, exactly, did they get for their cash that day?

Turns out, they blew more money in one night than many Americans make in a year, and all they got was some overpriced chicken and a whole lotta nothing.

See, Mitt Romney is going to lose this election, and it's going to be because he spent too much time with those willing to spend $50,000 on nothing that matters — like his campaign — rather than with those who wish they had $50,000 to spend on something that matters — like food and housing. He's going to lose because he understands wealth, but has no clue about the poor. And so, those rich donors of his have simply wasted their money. Mitt Romney will never be president of the United States.

Thanks to a videotape of the event, we've been given insight into what Gov. Romney really feels about poor and working class Americans. He's come under fire for his remarks stating that the 47 percent of Americans who pay no income taxes — usually because they make too little money — are dependent on the government, will vote for Obama no matter what, and aren't taking responsibility for their own lives.

Of course, that 47 percent also includes 18,000 or so citizens who make more than $500,000 a year — hard to see how they might be dependent on the government. It also includes seniors, who are leaning in favor of Romney. It includes poor southerners, who receive federal aid but plan to vote for Mitt because they are anti-gay, anti-abortion or just anti-Obama.

No matter which way you slice it, the comment wasn't just stupid, it was wrong on the facts. But Mitt Romney's campaign has never been about facts.

The fact is nearly all Americans pay taxes. Between state taxes, property taxes, payroll taxes, and that tax on your Big Mac, they're nearly impossible to avoid. We all contribute.

I think it's true that some people depend on the government. We depend on the government for a safety net because we cannot depend on big businesses to pay us what we're worth, or to not lay us off and outsource our jobs, or not destroy our retirement fund.

Many of us are working for the most profitable businesses in the country, corporations that pay their CEOs millions and bring their owners unimaginable wealth, but who pay their workers a pittance.

But here's the dirty little secret of our capitalist system — the rich don't get rich because they are smarter with money.

A single mother making minimum wage has to be smarter with money than any of the Wall Street bankers who caused the financial collapse of 2008. No, they get rich off the backs of the men and women who do the work that they can't, or won't, do for themselves.

How many cars can a factory owner make by himself? Not many. We workers create the products and services corporations sell, and businesses pocket the wealth while paying us less than what we're worth. And we let them.

We would have far fewer people on food stamps if the so-called "job creators" would actually create jobs and pay a decent wage.

Mitt Romney's comments weren't a misstep, but a statement of how he truly views the poor. And he said it in a room full of other rich men and women, with no press, and no critics, with only his wealthy friends as an audience. And none of them told him he was wrong.

Working together can rescue our beloved country

By Paul W. Westerman

Our country is in great danger, and I must express my opinion about our country.

I am 93 years old, and I was 10 years old when the '29 depression hit. I hoed out corn, tobacco and tomatoes for 50 cents a day as I was a farm boy, and my Dad, three brothers and myself raised 17 acres of tobacco, but couldn't pay for expenses and we lost our farm.

I graduated from Cairo High School in 1937-38 and entered the service from Henderson during the war. This is just to let you know that I am from Henderson County, have a farm in Webster County, and have lived here for 65 years.

Over the years our country has grown apart, and at one time we were all working together. When the war ended and

GUEST COLUMN

General Eisenhower came home from Europe, he decided to run for president and won handily.

As the years went by the Democrats and Republicans, and now the Tea Party, have grown so far apart that our country is in a great danger. They don't agree on anything, and this is the most political disaster that I have seen in my lifetime. And the things that are on TV and in the papers are heartbreaking for me.

How can senators and congressmen be so at each other's throats?

With 15 to 20 million people out of work and our country $16 trillion in debt, can't they see that our country is in the greatest peril since we became a nation?

All the people who were sent to Washington, instead of looking at each other across the aisles in hate for each other, must walk out in the aisles and shake hands and work together to save our country.

Time is running out, and the more than 400 billionaires who have built factories in foreign countries must come back to their country and build factories here and get our people back to work.

Yes, we still need unions for working people, but the government must have a powerful negotiating committee to work between unions and factory owners. Some say they want less government, but I believe we need more in this case.

Yes, our country stood together in World War II, and we defeated countries that had been planning wars for 10 or 12 years.

Seventeen million women and men stood together and answered the call to duty and about 250,000 gave their life for our country. Some lost legs and arms, and all were heroes.

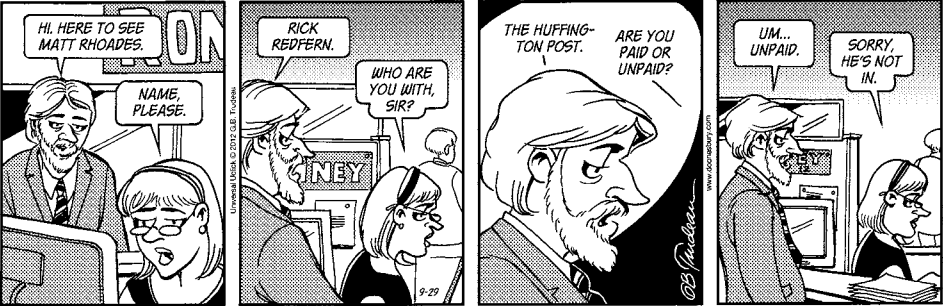

Billionaires, congressmen, senators and president working together can save our beloved country. You can be heroes without one of you dying or being wounded, but you must work together and it must be NOW.

The most valuable thing you have in this world are your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. They all need a country to be happy in, and that country is this country.

Please believe me when I say that our country needs you all, with every thing you can do to save our country.

Details emerge on Colo. suspect

By P. Solomon Banda
and Nicholas Riccardi
Associated Press

DENVER — The suspect in the Aurora movie shooting case mailed “burnt currency,” along with a notebook, to his psychiatrist before the attack. He threatened a professor and was banned from a university campus before withdrawing from its neuroscience graduate program. His defense team has added a psychiatrist.

Those were the few tidbits of information in hundreds of pages of heavily redacted court documents released Friday, which serve as the best chance the public has to understand what happened before James Holmes allegedly opened fire at a midnight screening of the new Batman movie more than two months ago.

The documents shed little light on Holmes’ possible motives or whether the university ignored warning signs about him. That’s partly because Arapahoe County District Judge William B. Sylvester continued to keep under seal the key documents in the case — the affidavit that lays out prosecutors’ case against Holmes, and the search warrants that allowed them to gather evidence against him.

Holmes, 24, faces 152 charges in the July 20 shooting that killed 12 people and injured 58 others.

Some of the documents are entirely blacked out. In others, Sylvester’s rulings on legal disputes, references to years-old case law and even copies of newspaper articles are redacted, along with information about the investigation.

The documents do shed a little more light on one of the main disputes in the case — Holmes’ threats against a professor, possibly the university psychiatrist, Dr. Lynne Fenton, who has testified that she contacted campus police after her last meeting with Holmes on June 11. Fenton, who testified Aug. 30, said she went to police to gather more information and communicate her “concern.”

She did not refer to her concern as a threat.

Prosecutors contended that Holmes was barred from campus after making the threats. The University of Colorado has said that Holmes was denied access to nonpublic buildings on campus because he withdrew as a neuroscience graduate student, not for safety reasons.

Masked teen killed by father, police say

By John Christoffersen
Associated Press

NEW FAIRFIELD, Conn. — A popular fifth-grade teacher fatally shot a masked, knife-wielding prowler outside his house during what appeared to be a late-night burglary attempt, only to discover he had killed his 15-year-old son, police say.

No immediate charges were brought against the father, Jeffrey Giuliano, in the shooting of his son, Tyler, around 1 a.m. Thursday. Police said they were investigating whether the father’s handgun was registered.

State police said Jeffrey Giuliano got a call from his sister next door saying that someone might be trying to break into her home. Giuliano grabbed a gun and went outside to investigate, troopers said.

Visitors arrive at the home of Jeffrey Giuliano on Friday in New Fairfield, Conn. Giuliano fatally shot a masked teenager in self-defense during what appeared to be an attempted burglary early Thursday morning, then discovered that he had killed his son, Tyler, state police said.

He confronted someone in a black ski mask and black clothing and opened fire when the person came at him with a knife, police said.

When officers arrived, the teen was lying in the driveway of his aunt’s home with gunshot wounds and the father was sitting on the grass. The teen was pronounced dead at the scene. A state trooper pulled back the ski mask to reveal that the victim was Tyler Giuliano. It was unclear if his father had already realized it by then.

Police said the youngster’s intentions were unclear and they were investigating whether he was actually trying to burglarize the house or if it was some type of prank gone wrong.

“All in all it’s a tragedy,” said State Police spokesman Lt. J. Paul Vance said.

Jeffrey Giuliano did not return a message seeking comment.

Gunman suffered mental illness

MINNEAPOLIS — The family of the man who killed four people at a Minneapolis sign company said he struggled for years with mental illness.

Police said Friday that Andrew J. Engeldinger, of Minneapolis, opened fire at Accent Signage Systems just hours after being let go from the company Thursday morning.

His family said in a statement released through the National Alliance on Mental Illness that they aren’t trying to excuse Engeldinger’s actions, but perhaps partially explain them.

Obama blocks foreign purchase

WASHINGTON — Citing national security risks, President Barack Obama on Friday blocked a Chinese company from owning four wind farm projects in northern Oregon near a Navy base where the U.S. military flies unmanned drones and electronic-warfare planes on training missions.

It was the first time in 22 years that a U.S. president has blocked such a foreign business deal.

Obama’s decision was likely to be another irritant in the increasingly tense economic relationship between the U.S. and China. It also comes against an election-year backdrop of intense criticism from Republican presidential challenger Mitt Romney, who accuses Obama of not being tough enough with China.

In his decision, Obama ordered Ralls Corp., a company owned by Chinese nationals, to divest its interest in the wind farms it purchased earlier this year near the Naval Weapons Systems Training Facility in Boardman, Ore.

FBI agents staying away from Benghazi

WASHINGTON — For security reasons, FBI agents are staying away from the Libyan city where a U.S. ambassador and three other Americans were killed, two law enforcement officials said Friday.

The officials said the bureau is not going to put agents in harm’s way and that the city of Benghazi must be made secure before the FBI sends investigators there.

The officials demanded anonymity because they are not authorized to speak on the record about an ongoing investigation.

FBI agents were sent to Libya last week to look into the Sept. 11 attack that killed Ambassador Chris Stevens, a State Department computer expert and two former Navy Seals.

Dems: House should return to work

WASHINGTON — Two Democrats lingering behind in Washington as fellow lawmakers campaign for re-election are demanding that Congress return immediately to confront a potential financial crisis.

Democratic Congressmen Chris Van Hollen, of Maryland, and Henry Waxman, of California, said Friday that Congress is shirking its duties, and that the seven-week recess now under way is the longest ever before an election.

They were quickly gavelled down by the Republican in the chairman, John Culberson, of Texas, and after eight minutes of silence returned to the chamber.

Kenya attacks last militant stronghold

MOGADISHU — Kenyan troops invaded al-Shabab’s last stronghold in Somalia on Friday, coming ashore in a pre-dawn beach landing at Kismayo that appeared likely to deprive the Islamist insurgents of their last big moneymaking enterprise.

African Union troops from Kenya, Uganda and Burundi have combined during the past 18 months to kick al-Shabab out of the capital Mogadishu and take a series of smaller towns that the insurgents fled to.

By Friday afternoon, Kenyan Defense Forces said that its ground troops were also steadily approaching Kismayo from the west. Al-Shabab, which is allied with al-Qaida, had earned money by collecting taxes on goods arriving at the Indian Ocean port, so the loss of the stronghold would be a double blow to the armed fundamentalist group that began attacks in 2007 and ultimately controlled all but a few blocks of the capital.

IRAQ

12 people killed in prison escape

BAGHDAD — Prisoners seized weapons and clashed with security guards in an hourslong standoff that killed 12 people, including 10 guards, and allowed dozens of al-Qaida-linked inmates to escape before ending Friday in Saddam Hussein’s hometown, Iraqi officials said.

The security breach drew sharp criticism of Iraqi security forces, which have been unable to stabilize the country almost a year after U.S. troops withdrew. Officials said that reinforcements had to be sent from Baghdad to help put down the riot and prisoners burned all the prison records, complicating efforts to track down those still on the run.

Monsoon rains, flooding kill 422

ISLAMABAD — Monsoon rains and flooding killed more than 400 people across Pakistan during the rainy season this year, authorities said Friday.

Pakistan suffers every year from flooding caused by massive monsoon rains that sweep across the country late in the summer and cause rivers and streams to overflow.

The National Disaster Management Authority said 422 people have been killed and nearly 3,000 have been injured during the season of heavy rains. About 5 million people have been affected by the resulting floods, according to statistics that were posted on the authority’s website.

Disgraced leader expelled from party

BEIJING — China’s communist leadership expelled Bo Xilai from the ruling party Friday and sought to bury him with charges varying from corruption to sexual affairs, aiming to sweep away their most damaging scandal in decades while finally scheduling their long-awaited leadership transition for November.

A statement from the party’s Politburo amounted to a surprisingly strong and wide-ranging indictment against Bo, effectively ending the public life of the flamboyant 63-year-old populist who was one of China’s best known politicians and whose ambition was considered a menace to the country’s top leaders.

Syrians dig through rubble of a building destroyed by a government airstrike as they search for survivors Friday in Azaz. A Syrian activist group, the Local Coordination Committees, said a Syrian warplane bombed the town near the Turkish border, killing several people.

Syrian rebels intensify bid to force out Assad’s forces

By Karin Laub
Associated Press

BEIRUT — Rebels on Friday pressed their broadest assault yet to drive President Bashar Assad’s forces out of Syria’s largest city, activists said, with fierce fighting erupting in an Aleppo neighborhood that is home to Kurds, an ethnic minority that has mostly stayed out of the civil war.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Leon Panetta said intelligence suggests Assad has moved some of Syria’s chemical weapons to better secure them. Panetta said the main sites are believed to be secure, though his comments indicated that there are lingering questions about what happened to some of the weapons.

On the diplomatic front, top representatives from Western nations and Middle East allies met Friday at the U.N. to urge Syria’s fractured opposition to unite.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton told the Friends of Syria group that the U.S. would deliver an additional $15 million in nonlethal aid and $30 million in humanitarian support, on top of more than $175 million already given to political opposition.

Diplomacy has been largely sidelined in the 18-month-old Syria conflict because a key tool — U.N. Security Council action — has been neutralized by vetoes from Assad allies Russia and China.

The military battle for control of the country also has been locked in a stalemate, most visibly in Aleppo, a northern city of 3 million. Since a rebel offensive on Aleppo two months ago, each side has controlled about half of the city and has repeatedly tried — but failed — to capture the rest. Aleppo would be a major strategic prize, giving the victor new momentum.

Late Thursday, rebels forces launched what they said would be a “decisive battle” that by Friday had spread to wide swaths of the city. “The city is witnessing one of the most violent days. All fronts are on fire,” Aleppo-based activist Baraa al-Halabi said.

Heavy clashes were reported Friday, with regime troops firing tank and mortar shells, and rebels using heavy machine guns, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades, said Aleppo activist Mohammed Saeed.

U.S. leads global rally for Syria’s opposition

By David Stringer
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The Obama administration moved Friday to rally Syria’s opposition with pledges of $45 million in new nonlethal and humanitarian assistance as the administration and other world leaders lamented the failure of diplomatic efforts to push Syrian President Bashar Assad from power.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said the U.S. would contribute an additional $15 million in nonlethal gear — mostly communications equipment — to the civilian opposition trying to oust Assad as well as $30 million in new humanitarian assistance to help those affected by the continuing violence.

She also delivered a new, stark warning to Iran that it must stop arming and supporting the Assad regime.

“It is no secret that our attempts to move forward at the U.N. Security Council have been blocked repeatedly, but the United States is not waiting,” Clinton said as she announced the new aid at a gathering of the Friends of Syria group that she hosted at a New York hotel on the sidelines of the U.N. General Assembly.

With U.N. action blocked by Russia and China, Clinton said the rest of the world must support the Syrian opposition.

She also said it was urgent that the fractured foes of the regime unite around plans for a political transition.

■ Obama gains support
with Dream Act

By Trish Choate
Scripps Howard News Service

President Barack Obama and GOP challenger Mitt Romney are both reaching out to Hispanic voters in the scramble before Nov. 6. Campaign commercials in Spanish, the candidates' recent appearances on Spanish-language television network Univision and the Latino speakers featured at the national political conventions show that the two candidates agree that the Hispanic vote matters. But Latinos don't all agree on which candidate matters when it comes to improving the country.

Q: WHY ARE HISPANIC VOTERS IMPORTANT IN THIS ELECTION?
A: Their influence at the polls is growing through sheer numbers. Hispanics account for most of the country's population growth in the past decade. More than 50 million Latinos live in America, and more than 21 million are eligible to vote. Record numbers turned out for midterm elections two years ago, but their participation has lagged behind their share of eligible voters. Not only is every vote important in the close race between Romney and Obama, but battleground states like Colorado and Florida also have large Hispanic populations that could sway the election's outcome.

Q: DO HISPANICS VOTE AS ONE?
A: They lean Democratic, and polls indicate most support Obama at rates as high as 70 percent. Still, Hispanics also cast ballots as Republicans, independents and third-party adherents. Political analysts say they may begin leaning more Republican if they experience economic success in increasing numbers. In part, Latinos don't vote as one because their backgrounds vary. Most — 63 percent — trace their roots to Mexico, followed by Cuba, El Salvador, the Dominican Republic and other countries. Cuban-Americans in Florida have formed a formidable voting bloc, mostly for Republicans, for years. Some are fully integrated into the American culture. Others are recent immigrants who don't speak English.

Q: WHAT ISSUES MATTER TO HISPANICS?
A: Like most Americans, of immigration reform, and many are unhappy with initiatives such as voter ID laws, which some political observers say will unjustly keep minorities from the polls.

Q: HOW DOES OBAMA STACK UP WITH HISPANICS?
A: Obama generally scores points with his support of the DREAM Act, legislation providing a pathway to citizenship for young immigrants. He loses points for not yet seeing that measure or comprehensive immigration reform become law. He lost more points because of the record levels of deportations of undocumented immigrants that took place under his watch. As for the economy, it's improving, but the recovery is still weak, burdened by job creation that putters instead of zooms. Against the wider backdrop of the Democratic Party, Hispanics might take into account pro-choice views and opposition to a perceived GOP "war on women" in early September.

Q: HOW DOES ROMNEY STACK UP WITH HISPANICS?
A: Romney touts the GOP as "the party of hope and opportunity," an appeal to Hispanics looking to America for economic success. He also points to his background as a successful business executive as proof he can turn the economy around better than Obama. Romney lost ground by speaking out against the DREAM Act and for voicing his belief illegal immigrants will "self-deport" if jobs dry up. He's been softening his positions on immigration without laying out detailed plans for reform. Accused of switching positions on abortion, Romney recently said he opposes abortion except in cases of rape, incest and a threat to the mother's life. The final exception leaves a wide loophole for some. Against the wider backdrop of the GOP, Romney may suffer because of Republican initiatives such as voter ID that some contend disenfranchise minorities. Debates a shot at finding that 'defining moment'

By Connie Cass
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In presidential politics, everybody's searching for "the moment." The campaigns don't know when or how it will come, but they watch for something — awkward words, an embarrassing image — that can break through and become the defining symbol of the other guy's flaws. Now all eyes will be on the three presidential debates, especially the all-important first one Wednesday night, a perfect incubator for such a moment. The unpredictable nature of the debates is part of what attracts tens of millions of live-TV viewers. A big blunder or "gotcha" quip is sure to be remembered. And President Barack Obama and challenger Mitt Romney will be fielding questions for 4½ hours in all, a long time to stay on message. "If we have any moment in terms of seeing the true, the real, the unscripted candidate, it's likely to happen on the debate stage," said Mitchell McKinney, a University of Missouri associate professor who studies the presidential match-ups. It's the all-too-human slips that live on. Think of Al Gore sighing loudly and often, a bored-looking George H.W. Bush checking his watch, or Richard Nixon appearing clammy and tired next to a tanned and rested John F. Kennedy in the first televised debate in 1960. "Whether it's sighing or looking at your watch, people will remember that. And they'll have a lot of help because the press is going to replay it and replay it and it's going to show up on 'Saturday Night Live,'" said Tad Devine, who was a senior adviser to Gore's campaign. "It becomes part of their daily conversation, and it takes hold." Romney and Obama know the risk firsthand. During the GOP primary debates, Romney played into worries that his wealth distances him from ordinary people by offering to back his words with a friendly wager — a $10,000 bet. In the 2008 Democratic primaries, Obama reinforced criticism that he's arrogant and aloof. As Hillary Rodham Clinton good-naturedly tried to deflect a question about her likability, Obama cut in. "You're likable enough, Hillary," he said dismissively. He didn't even look up. For John McCain, it was a Florida campaign rally on Sept. 15, 2008. As Lehman Brothers filed for bankruptcy, the nation's financial system teetered on the brink and stocks tanked, McCain insisted that "the fundamentals of our economy are strong." The Obama campaign jumped on that phrase to portray McCain as oblivious — and it stuck. A question from a college student about funding for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan tripped up John Kerry in 2004. "I actually did vote for the $87 billion before I voted against it," Kerry declared. President George W. Bush's campaign had what it needed: the perfect shorthand for Kerry as a flip-flopper. The big moments don't have to be bad. It was Republican strategist Lee Atwater who promoted the idea of a moment that defines a candidate's character. He saw a positive one when Vice President George H.W. Bush stood up to CBS anchorman Dan Rather in a live interview about the Iran-Contra scandal. The aggressive performance quashed criticism that Bush was wimpy. In his 1980 challenge to President Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan pulled off two famous debate lines that helped win a landslide. "There you go again," he quipped when Carter accused him of planning Medicare cuts. And he asked America a question that still echoes today: "Are you better off now than you were four years ago?" Reagan's shaky performance in the first debate of 1984 raised questions about the 73-year-old president's fitness for another term. Next round, when asked about the age issue, Reagan silenced doubters by declaring with a twinkle that he would not "exploit for political purposes my opponent's youth and inexperience." At that moment, "the campaign was over," the Democratic nominee, Walter Mondale, later told PBS journalist Jim Lehrer.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY:
"IF THE TRUTH BE KNOWN!"
It was about one week before Jesus crucifixion. His public ministry would soon end. In spite of all that Jesus had done and said many refused to believe in Him (John 12:37). A few verses later we discover a group of people who did believe in Jesus but refused to confess him for fear of being put out of the synagogue John 12:42. Do you think that maybe they knew what happened to the blind man in John 9:34? The telling verse is in John 12:43 "For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God". Jesus went on to say in (Vs. 48) "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." We have a choice while on earth-do we seek to please men and be rejected by God or seek to please God and be accepted by Him in the judgment? It is often the case that action or inaction is based on what is popular among our peers. Sadly some live much of their lives trying to appease others while refusing to honor and respect God's way. Jesus clearly stated that such things as giving and praying should not be done to receive glory from man (Matthew 6:1-7). If the glory of men is our goal then enjoy it while you can for that is all you will receive. So the real question remains-Will I live my life to please others or to please God? "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness..." (Matthew 6:33a).

Stocks seal 3Q gains despite bumpy days

The Associated Press

Stocks posted solid gains for the third quarter, although the ride got bumpy at the end.

Stocks fell five days of the last six, including on Friday, the last trading day of the quarter. But the big indexes are still up 4 percent or more for the three months. They're ahead 10 percent or more for the year.

That's despite all the anxiety about the euro, Iran and U.S. politics.

Actually, those worries are exactly why stocks are up, said Uri Landesman, who runs the Platinum Partners hedge fund. He notes that investors around the world feel that U.S. stocks look pretty good, compared to some of the alternatives.

"People are scared, and 2008 wasn't that long ago, and Europe remains a problem," he said. Those factors "are keeping the market up in the face of some really questionable economic data and questionable behavior by the Fed."

Investors got some more of that iffy economic data on Friday. The Commerce Department said consumer spending rose a half-percent last month, compared with July.

That was a big jump — but it was driven by higher gas prices, rather than by spending on clothing, electronics and general merchandise. Consumer spending drives nearly 70 percent of economic activity.

The news pushed stocks lower. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 48.84 points to close at 13,437.13.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 6.48 points to 1,440.67. The Nasdaq composite index fell 20.37 points to 3,116.23.

The losses had been steeper in the morning before stocks recovered somewhat around midday.

Stocks fell in all industry groups in the S&P 500 except utilities. Telecommunications and information technology stocks had the biggest losses.

Many investors worry that the recent gains by stocks aren't justified, considering the risks of a confrontation with Iran, weak corporate profits, and Europe's troubles.

The price of corn surged 5.6 percent Friday after the U.S. estimated that supplies hit their lowest level in eight years.

The U.S. Agriculture Department said corn in storage from the 2011 harvest totaled 988 million bushels on Sept. 1, which was 12 percent less than the previous year.

About one-half of this year's crop is in poor to very poor condition as the harvest nears its halfway point.

Global corn supplies are tight because of a devastating U.S. drought and poor harvest earlier this year in South America. Inventories will increase slightly after this year's harvest but so will demand, predicted Northstar Commodity analyst Jason Ward.

Corn for December delivery rose 40 cents to end at $7.5625 per bushel. The grain rose 19 percent for the third quarter ending Friday.

Commodities posted strong gains for the July-through-September quarter as traders bet on a healthier global economy. The U.S. and European central banks have taken steps to try to boost growth. Similar action is expected soon from China. Stronger growth will improve demand for commodities.

Gold and silver prices rose as investors bought contracts as a hedge against inflation. Other commodities benefited from hope that the stimulus measures will strengthen demand.

In Friday's trading, gold for December delivery rose $6.60 to finish at $1,773.90 per ounce. The price gained 10.6 percent in the third-quarter, its strongest showing by percentage since the second quarter of 2010.

December silver fell 8.9 cents to end at $34.577 per ounce, which marked a third-quarter gain of 25 percent.

October platinum rose $19.40 to $1,655.30 per ounce.

The price increased nearly 15 percent during the quarter as labor unrest in South African mines created supply disruptions.

December palladium rose $5.40 to $640.80 an ounce, up 9.6 percent in the quarter.

December wheat rose 47 cents to finish at $9.025 per bushel, up 19 percent in the quarter. November soybeans increased 30.25 cents to $16.01 per bushel. The price rose 12 percent in the quarter.

In energy trading, benchmark oil rose 34 cents to $92.19 per barrel Friday. Heating oil rose 1.21 cents to $3.1694 per gallon, wholesale gasoline increased 19.77 cents, or 6.3 percent, to $3.342 per gallon and natural gas gained 2.3 cents to $3.32 per 1,000 cubic feet.

FROM THE COVER

could do so safely.

The campaign comes after some high-profile cases of counterfeit drugs reaching American patients earlier this year.

In February and again in April, the FDA warned doctors and cancer clinics around the country that it had determined they had bought fake Avastin, a pricey injectable cancer medicine, from a “gray market” wholesaler. The fake Avastin vials originated in Asia or Eastern Europe and were transferred through a network of shady wholesalers before being sold to clinics by a wholesaler claiming to be in Montana.

In another case, the FDA issued a warning in May after learning consumers shopping on the Internet had bought fake versions of generic Adderall, a popular medication for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder.

No deaths or serious injuries have been linked to those fakes, but Hamburg notes that when drugs don’t help patients get better, doctors usually blame the disease or assume a different medicine is needed. That means most fakes aren’t detected.

So the FDA, which has put increasing focus on the counterfeiting problem, on Friday launched a website, www.FDA.gov/BeSafeRx, that shows consumers how to determine if an online pharmacy is safe.

“Buying prescription medicine from a fake online pharmacy can be dangerous, or even deadly,” the site warns.

It includes tips on how to spot illegal pharmacies, links to state databases of licensed pharmacies and explanations of all the dangers of rogue pharmacies. Besides likely getting fake drugs, that includes the risk that they will infect your computer with viruses, sell your personal and financial information to other rogue websites and Internet scammers, or charge you for products you never ordered or received.

Many rogue pharmacies claim to be in Canada — because Americans know medicines are cheaper there and assume that’s why they’re getting a deal. Many fraudulent sites even put the word Canada in their name, or display the Canadian flag prominently on the site. Their web storefronts are slick and look professional. And they all offer prices that are unbelievably low.

“If the low prices seem too good to be true, they probably are,” Hamburg said.

The FDA is collaborating with several other federal agencies and departments and even Interpol in the campaign, Hamburg said, and it has asked medical and pharmaceutical industry groups to join in.

It’s also reaching out to doctors, pharmacists and medical facilities to spread the word. They’ll get access to materials they can download, from patient fact sheets and discussion guides to sample blog items and web banners for a practice’s own website. There’s also a list of tips to help doctors determine if a patient may be buying medicine online.

The agency will do a follow-up survey to see if the campaign’s message is reaching the public.

“What’s truly important to us is that consumers know how to look for an online pharmacy that’s legitimate and safe,” Hamburg said.

PRESCRIPTIONS from 1A

view options, including exploring whether other tests (blood, hair, etc.) could be as effective,” the governor said. “We are also consulting with private insurance groups and managed care organizations about their policies regarding this standard of care, because some are covering the tests while others are not.”

Under the law, which took effect in July, doctors must obtain a “baseline” urine sample from patients who are prescribed controlled substances for longer than three months. If a test indicates patients are likely to abuse or sell the substance, doctors aren’t allowed to write a new prescription. The law also requires random drug tests.

It was unclear how many people would be afected by the new rule.

Critics of the law say they told legislators of potential consequences of the law before it passed.

“We anticipated this. Now we’re starting to see third-party vendors denying payment for the tests, as we feared,” said Cory Meadows, spokesman for the Kentucky Medical Association. “It’s still early in the game, so concrete numbers are hard to come by at this point. But this certainly will be a significant issue.”

Rep. Stan Lee, R-Lexington, says the consequences “were not unforeseen.”

“Some of us were not in favor of this bill for the primary reason that it punishes law-abiding citizens for the criminal acts of others,” said Lee, who voted against the measure.

sist with the building, but it must also equip it with machinery to process materials.

“We’re just going to have to wait and see what these bids are when they come in,” Austin said. “We made a lot of small changes and some large changes. I’m anticipating it will come in within our budget.”

The recycling alliance plans to use the building as the centerpiece of its campaign to ramp up recycling efforts in this region.

The eventual goal is to have a facility that could take a large portion of solid waste now going to landfills and divert it to the planned building, where it would be sorted, baled and marketed. The alliance hopes to do the same for surrounding communities that are not full members of the alliance, which currently includes only the city of Henderson and the counties of Henderson, Union and Webster.

Apple CEO apologizes for error-ridden new mobile map service

By Barbara Ortutay Associated Press

NEW YORK — Apple CEO Tim Cook apologized Friday for the company’s error-ridden new mobile mapping service and pledged to improve the application installed on tens of millions of smartphones. In an unusual mea culpa, he invited frustrated consumers to turn to the competition.

Cook said Apple “fell short” of its own expectations.

“Everything we do at Apple is aimed at making our products the best in the world. We know that you expect that from us, and we will keep working nonstop until Maps lives up to the same incredibly high standard,” he said in a letter posted online.

Apple released an update to its iPhone and iPad operating system last week that replaced Google Maps with Apple’s own map application. But users quickly complained that the new software offered fewer details, lacked public transit directions and misplaced landmarks, among other problems.

People have been flocking to social media to complain and make fun of the app’s glitches, which include judging landscape features by their names. The hulking Madison Square Garden arena in New York, for instance, shows up as green park space because of the word “garden.”

Until the software is improved, Cook recommended that people use competing map applications to get around — a rare move for the world’s most valuable company, which prides itself on producing industry-leading gadgets that easily surpass rivals.

Apple has made missteps in the past — even under founder and CEO Steve Jobs, whose dogged perfectionism was legendary.

“I think they are clearing the air and, more importantly, clarifying why they had to do their own maps,” said Tim Bajarin, a Creative Strategies analyst who’s followed Apple for more than three decades.

He recalled an infamous problem with the iPhone 4’s antenna that interfered with reception when people covered a certain spot with a bare hand. Jobs apologized, though he denied there was an antenna problem that needed fixing. Apple quickly recovered.

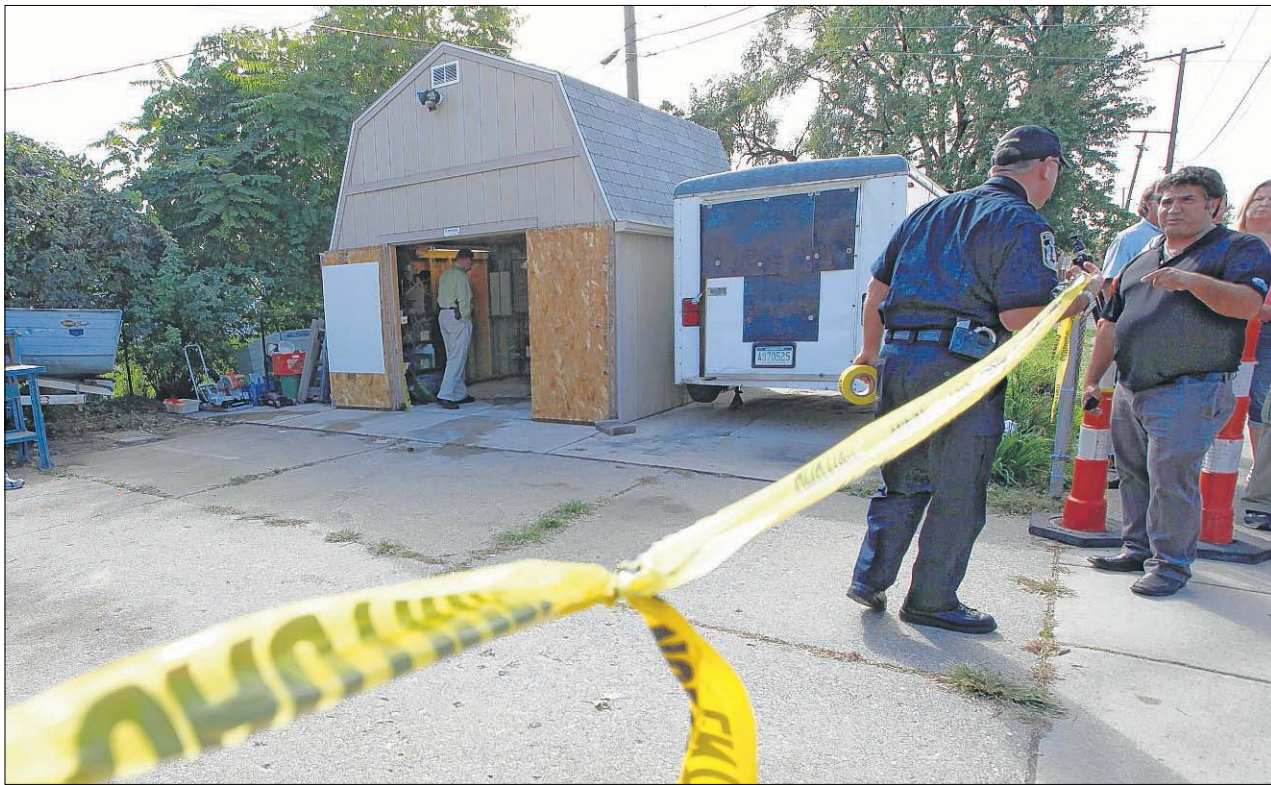

But Cook’s remarks went further, saying the company was “extremely sorry” and promising to make swift changes.

Contrast that with Jobs’ statement from 2010, when he said the antenna issue had been “blown so out of proportion that it’s incredible.”

Still, Jobs also acknowledged that Apple was “stunned and upset and embarrassed.” But he insisted the antenna issue was not widespread and only a small number of users complained to Apple’s warranty service.

On Friday, Cook said the new version of the mapping app was designed to give users the features they’ve been asking for. It includes turn-by-turn directions, voice integration and a 3-D fly-over feature.

Google’s map application for the iPhone did not give turn-by-turn directions or voice-guided navigation, although its version for Android devices does.

Police tape blocks a driveway where authorities drilled for soil samples in the floor of a shed at a Roseville, Mich., home Friday. Police have been told by a source that former Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa may be buried beneath a driveway.

Michigan home site of Hoffa search

By Corey Williams Associated Press

ROSEVILLE, Mich. — Jimmy Hoffa is presumed dead, cocooned in mystery and innuendo and missing for the past 37 years. Patricia Szpunar just hopes that if the former Teamsters boss’ remains do turn up, they’re not in her backyard.

Over the years, authorities have dug up a Michigan horse farm, looked under a swimming pool and pulled up floorboards in their quest for Hoffa.

The latest search led police, droves of local and national reporters and dozens of curious onlookers to Szpunar’s brick ranch-style home in Roseville.

“I’m looking forward to everybody going home,” she told The Associated Press on Friday from her front porch. Szpunar has lived at the house since 1988.

Minutes earlier, a small mob of people scooted by, following closely behind police who were carrying tubes of soil samples taken from two 6-foot holes drilled through the concrete floor of her backyard shed.

Police in the mostly working- and middle-class community north of Detroit recently received a tip from a man who claimed he saw someone buried there about 35 years ago and that the body possibly belonged to Hoffa.

The crowd buzzed Friday, muffled a bit by the periodic whir of the drill. Szpunar cautiously peeked at the activity from the security of her partially enclosed rear deck.

“It’s not excitement for me,” she lamented. “This has turned my life upside down. My son can’t even come out and cut the grass.”

She may receive a respite this weekend. The samples taken Friday are expected to be tested Monday by forensic anthropologists at Michigan State University for traces of human decomposition. Wet soil and clay were found, but there was no visible sign of human remains, Roseville Police Chief James Berlin said.

A negative test Monday means police likely will rip down the yellow tape roping off the entrance to Szpunar’s yard — Nothing to see here.

But if decomposition is found, authorities will dig up the driveway, whether it’s Hoffa beneath it or not, according to Berlin.

“I don’t believe it’s Mr. Hoffa. I don’t know what it is,” Berlin said. “It’s still a crime scene until we get verification from the anthropologist that there are no human remains present.”

“We received credible information that a crime may have occurred. We’re not doing anything we wouldn’t have done on any other case. That shed did not exist at the time this allegedly occurred. The prior outbuilding that was there did not have a concrete floor.”

The city of Roseville would pay for her driveway if it’s ripped up, Szpunar said.

Hoffa was an acquaintance of mobsters and adversary to federal officials. He spent time in prison for jury tampering. He was last seen July 30, 1975, outside a restaurant in Oakland County, more than 30 miles to the west.

The day he disappeared, Hoffa was supposed to meet with a New Jersey Teamsters boss and a Detroit mafia captain.

He was declared legally dead in 1982.

Drugs are believed to be behind actor’s violent end

By Greg Risling Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — An attorney said Friday he believes a drug-induced psychosis was responsible for an outburst by an actor that police say ended in the slaying of his landlady before the former “Sons of Anarchy” cast member plunged to his death.

Johnny Lewis, 28, had been arrested three times during the past year and officials were concerned about his mental health and the danger he posed to others. His lawyer Jonathan Mandel, who represented Lewis in the criminal cases, said drugs may have been a factor in the actor’s final hours.

“He probably had gotten into marijuana or some medication and that caused him to snap,” Mandel said. “If you take certain drugs it triggers that psychosis. A lot of people don’t come back.”

Authorities said they were still searching for a motive behind the strangulation death of 81-year-old Catherine Davis.

Authorities found Davis and Lewis dead Wednesday after neighbors reported a woman screaming inside her home that had been ransacked, and where glass was shattered and a dead cat was found. Neighbors said a man jumped a fence and attacked a painter and homeowner next door.

Johnny Lewis

Investigators are awaiting toxicology tests for Lewis to determine whether he had drugs or alcohol in his system at the time of his death.

“(Lewis) being under the influence is something we are looking at based on his behavior and based on what people have told us about his past,” said police Cmdr. Andrew Smith.

The body of Lewis, who played Kip “Half-Sack” Epps on the TV drama “Sons of Anarchy,” was found in a driveway, and he could have jumped or fallen from the roof, garage or balcony, or tumbled down stairs from a patio area, Smith said. Police said Lewis is the only suspect in the death of Davis.

Probation officials earlier this year expressed concern about Lewis’ mental health. The report was prepared in a case in which Lewis was accused of attempting to break into the home of a woman. That case came about six weeks after Lewis hit two men over the head with a Perrier bottle during a fight.

The probation official wrote of being “very concerned for the well-being of not only the community but that of the defendant.”

The report added Lewis suffered from some form of chemical dependency and mental health issue, and was a transient.

“Given this, (Lewis) will continue to be a threat to any community he may reside,” it said.

Lewis was released from Los Angeles County Jail a week ago, according to court records. He had pleaded no contest to assault with a deadly weapon and attempted burglary in separate cases, documents show.

Lewis was earning about $20,000 a year as an actor and he had been living with his parents when he was first arrested in January. Two probation reports note that Lewis was ordered to stay away from drugs.

Wizards' Wall out with knee injury

WASHINGTON — Washington Wizards point guard John Wall called his upcoming absence because of a left knee injury “a minor setback.” Team president Ernie Grunfeld labeled it “a bump in the road.”

However it's described, Wall is expected to miss the first dozen or so games of the NBA's regular season after the Wizards announced Friday that their best player — the No. 1 overall pick in the 2010 draft from Kentucky — was diagnosed with the early stages of a stress injury to his left knee cap.

The Wizards said the injury does not require surgery. If his rehab goes as expected, Wall will be sidelined for about two months in all.

Francona, Alomar Tribe candidates

CLEVELAND — Terry Francona has joined Sandy Alomar Jr. as a candidate to become manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Alomar prepared for his first game as interim manager Friday, a day after Manny Acta was fired. General manager Chris Antonetti said both were candidates and others currently employed by teams could become part of the search.

Francona tells The Associated Press “I'm excited and I'm honored that they would give me an interview. I know Sandy Alomar is also a candidate. He's a good friend of mine.”

NHL, locked-out players negotiate

NEWYORK — The NHL and the players' association seemingly had a good day on Friday as they returned to the negotiating table.

It just wasn't good enough to bring the sides all that much closer to the end of the lockout that threatens the start of the hockey regular season.

The league and the union got back to bargaining for the first time since players were locked out on Sept. 16, and the sides discussed secondary issues without broaching the big economic divide that really is the essence of the dispute.

Auto journalist Economaki dies

DOVER,Del. — Chris Economaki, a journalist regarded as the authoritative voice in motorsports for decades, died Friday. He was 91.

National Speed Sport News, where Economaki worked as an editor for more than 60 years, announced his death Friday. It did not release a cause of death.

Economaki was known as the “Dean of American Motorsports Journalism,” and worked in TV for more than 40 years with stints at ABC, CBS and ESPN. He was part of ABC's first telecast from Daytona International Speedway in 1961.

Reds' Bailey no-hits Bucs

No-hitter is record seventh of the season

Wire reports

Homer Bailey of the Cincinnati Reds threw the season's seventh no-hitter, beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 1-0 on Friday night.

The seven no-hitters matches the modern record for most in a season, tying 1990 and 1991. There were eight no-hitters in 1884.

The last no-hitter for the Reds was a perfect game by Tom Browning on Sept. 16, 1988. This was the 15th no-hitter in Reds history.

Bailey (13-10) walked one and struck out 10. He threw 115 pitches and retired the side in order in the ninth, striking out pinch-hitter Brock Holt then getting pinch-hitter Michael McKenry and Alex Presley to both pop out.

The 26-year-old Bailey improved to 5-0 in his six career starts with a 1.19 ERA at PNC Park. All four of his complete games and both his shut-outs have come against Pittsburgh.

Cardinals 12, Nationals 2: Allen Craig matched his career best with four hits to go with two RBIs, Yadier Molina hit a two-run home run and the St. Louis Cardinals punished Edwin Jackson and the Washington Nationals early in a 12-2 victory Friday night to win a matchup of teams on the cusp of clinchers.

Cincinnati Reds starting pitcher Homer Bailey (34) delivers during the first inning of a game against the Pittsburgh Pirates in Pittsburgh on Friday night. Bailey pitched the record seventh no-hitter of the season as the Reds beat the Pirates 1-0.

Marlins 2, Phillies 1: Carlos Lee's game-winning single in the bottom of the ninth inning lifted the Miami Marlins to a 2-1 win over Philadelphia and eliminated the Phillies from playoff contention Friday night.

Mets 3, Braves 1: Lucas Duda's three-run homer in the seventh gave New York the lead, Jonathon Niese pitched seven strong innings for his third straight win and the Mets beat Tim Hudson and the Braves 3-1 on Friday night.

Astros 7, Brewers 6: Edgar Gonzalez allowed one hit before tiring in the sixth and Brett Wallace, Jason Castro and Jose Altuve all homered and the Houston Astros beat Yovani Gallardo for the first time in three seasons, dousing the Milwaukee Brewers' faint playoff hopes with a 7-6 victory Friday night.

Orioles 9, Red Sox 1: Chris Tillman pitched eight innings of one-hit ball, Ryan Flaherty hit his first career grand slam and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Boston Red Sox 9-1 Friday night to secure their grip on the top AL wildcard spot.

Indians 8, Royals 5: Sandy Alomar Jr. won his first game as Indians manager as Jason Kipnis drove in three runs and Cleveland beat Kansas City 8-5 on Friday night, handing the Royals their sixth straight loss.

Twins 4, Tigers 2: Ryan Doumit had four RBIs for Minnesota, including the go-ahead two-run double in the eighth inning to help the Twins beat Detroit 4-2 on Friday and keep the Tigers from moving any closer to the AL Central title.

Yankees 11, Blue Jays 4: Russell Martin hit a three-run homer, Eric Chavez added a two-run shot and the New York Yankees maintained their one-game lead atop the AL East by beating the Toronto Blue Jays 11-4 on Friday night.

White Sox 3, Rays 1: Alex Rios hit his career-high 25th homer and the Chicago White Sox gave their fading playoff hopes a boost, beating Tampa Bay 3-1 on Friday night to end the Rays' eight-game winning streak.

Angels 7, Rangers 4: Jered Weaver became the American League's first 20-game winner, Mike Trout hit a leadoff homer and the Los Angeles Angels beat Texas 7-4 Friday night to prevent the Rangers from clinching a playoff berth.

Ravens get a break after tight win

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — And on the 19th day, the Baltimore Ravens rested.

Baltimore has already played on Monday night, Sunday night and Thursday night. The Ravens endured four games in 18 days, the last three of which were decided in the final minute.

So after holding on to beat winless Cleveland 23-16 Thursday night, the Ravens (3-1) were given until Monday to recover from a difficult stretch that required at least one veteran player to do a bit of homework to keep up the pace.

Safety Ed Reed made two tackles and knocked down three passes against the Browns after having only three days to rebound from Sunday night's 31-30 win over New England.

“Ed was bumped up. It was nothing major, but he was bumped up,” coach John Harbaugh said. “He was in the training room, he was doing treatment on his own at home, taking the equipment home and treating himself. He was basically treating himself 24/7. I just have some admiration for the man.”

Reed considers his home therapy to be nothing more than part of the job.

Baltimore Ravens long snapper Morgan Cox tackles Cleveland Browns wide receiver Josh Cribbs (16) as Cribbs' helmet is dislodged from a hit by another player during the first half of Thursday night's NFL game in Baltimore.

“It's how you approach it, and it's how you take care of yourself,” he said. “I do a great job teaming up with my doctor, trying to recover. I had a sprained knee last week, and I made it back doing constant treatment. They make it tough on you. It's how you invest though. You can either buy fancy cars or take care of your body.”

If Reed was asked to give his review of Thursday night games, he'd give it two thumbs down.

“With this league changing, and the people upstairs making decisions to adapt to this economy, we're the ones who are in jeopardy as far as injuries and stuff like that,” he said. “That's why you have to take care of yourself and do the things that are going to help you rejuvenate and recover. I know a lot of guys out there were fighting fatigue at the end of the game.”

The Ravens came in as 13-point favorites over the Browns, but Baltimore was pressed the entire 60 minutes before securing its ninth straight win over Cleveland. Browns rookie Brandon Weeden threw two passes into the end zone in the closing seconds, and after the second one soared out of play, the Ravens could finally exhale.

“Definitely too close for comfort,” Reed said. “But a win is a win.”

On a night that marked the return of the regular NFL officials, the Ravens were penalized 11 times for 100 yards.

Truex looks to rediscover winning ways at Dover track

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press

DOVER,Del. — Martin Truex Jr. wanted a lifetime for the triumphant feeling of winning a Cup race.

When he took the checkered flag at Dover International Speedway in June 2007, Truex's boyhood dream came true — at a spot he considers his hometown track.

More than five years later, in what only seems like a lifetime in NASCAR, Truex is still waiting for his second win.

Sunday would be a great time to get one. Truex needs a victory in a hurry if he wants to jumpstart his already fading championship pursuit.

His first victory is becoming a distant memory.

“I don't think I probably enjoyed it as much as I should have,” Truex said. “I didn't think it would be this far until the next one.”

The victory drought continues even as he enjoys perhaps his best season.

Truex is having his strongest season since he made the Chase for now-defunct Dale Earnhardt Inc. in 2007. His six top-five finishes this season for Michael Waltrip Racing are one more than his combined total from 2009-2011 and he came oh-so close to winning in September at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

Throw in a three-year contract extension with primary sponsor NAPA and MWR, and it's really been a season to savor for Truex.

Winning a championship would make it that much sweeter.

But with eight races left, time is already running out to make a serious run.

Truex, from nearby Mayetta, N.J., finished ninth and 17th in his first Chase races and is 10th in the standings entering Sunday's race at Dover. He's 34 points behind leader Jimmie Johnson.

He showed flashes Friday in the No. 56 Toyota that he should be in the thick of contention for a win when he posted the fastest time in the first practice with a speed of 157.082 mph.

“It's a big weekend for us. We really haven't started the Chase off the way we want to,” Truex said Friday. “This is a good place for us to come and turn it around and get on the right track, get the momentum going in the right direction.”

His 2007 victory at Dover propelled him into the Chase, and another win Sunday would surely bolster his position down the stretch. He was on a bit of a roll entering the Chase and nearly won at Atlanta.

Truex appeared to be positioned for the win until Jamie McMurray smashed into the wall on the front straightaway, bringing out a caution with three laps to go. The leaders went to pit road, and Denny Hamlin's crew got him back on the track first, just ahead of Truex. Truex faded to fourth.

Maestro of Manhattan

■ In second tenure, Bill Snyder raising K-State football once again

By Dave Skretta
Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. — There has to be a reason to seek out the sleepy college town that's home to Kansas State University.

It's two hours by car from Kansas City, out in the heart of the Flint Hills, tucked away in a picturesque valley well off Interstate 70. It's off Exit 313, for those who have time for the drive, past flowing fields of golden wheat and the natural tall grass acreages of the Konza Prairie.

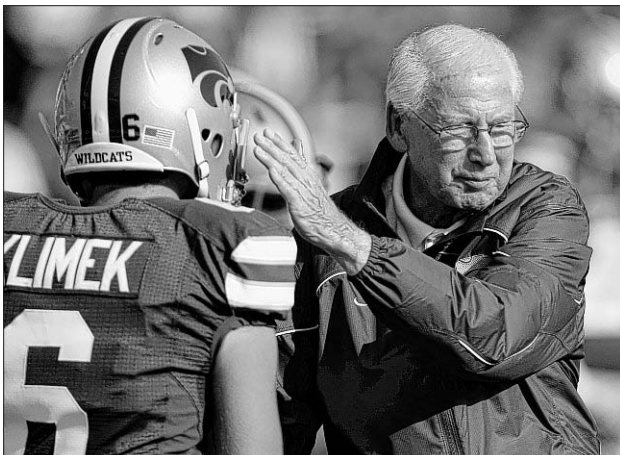

Two decades ago, Bill Snyder gave people a reason to find it.

The nondescript offensive coordinator from Iowa showed up one day and took over a program that had been winless in 27 games, proclaiming that the "opportunity for the greatest turnaround in college football history exists here today." It wasn't hyperbole, either. Snyder actually believed it, and then made it work, taking the downtrodden program to previously unthinkable heights.

Now, after stepping away for a brief retirement, the maestro of Manhattan is doing it again.

Relying on the same principles and instilling the same beliefs in a new generation of players, Snyder has the No. 7 Wildcats off to another 4-0 start. The ranking is their highest since the 2003 season, when Kansas State won its first conference title since FDR was in office, and represents yet another benchmark for a coach who keeps moving his team ever higher.

"People asked me what I thought of him coming back, and I said, 'What he's doing is proving to everyone that it wasn't luck the first time around," said former Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, who once labeled Snyder not merely coach of the year or decade but "coach of the century." Perhaps now, he's coach of the millennium.

ORLIN WAGNER/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two decades ago, coach Bill Snyder, right, gave people a reason to find Manhattan, Kan., turning around a Kansas State football program that had been a national laughingstock. Now, the soon-to-be 73-year-old Snyder is at it again.

Kansas State is coming off a dramatic 24-19 victory over then-No. 6 Oklahoma, the highest-ranked victory in a true road game in school history, and its first in Norman since 1997.

The Wildcats have a throwback Heisman Trophy contender in quarterback Collin Klein, a Darren Sproles-like dynamo in running back John Hubert, and a bend-but-don't-dare-break defense that made life miserable for Sooners quarterback Landry Jones, expected to be a first-round NFL draft pick. In short, they have all the ingredients to make an improbable run at a national championship.

As if anything is improbable with Snyder talking the sideline.

"Bill's been described in a number of ways, but there's nothing he does that surprises me," said former wide receiver Kevin Lockett, who was part of the program's foundation in the 1990s and whose son, Tyler Lockett, is now a sophomore on the team.

"He hasn't changed a bit," added offensive lineman Ryan Lilja, now a member of the Kansas City Chiefs. "Watching how his teams play, how his players react to him, the guy hasn't changed a bit."

Just about everything else has changed, though.

The price of gas is four times what it was in 1988, when he first drove into town. Perestroika is a distant memory, George Michael and Gloria Estefan no longer top the charts, and the chic style popularized by television shows such as "Magnum, P.I." is considered garish at best.

The game has changed, too. The wishbone offense run by Switzer has been replaced by pass-happy attacks predicated on spreading the field.

Some of the game's greatest minds, such as the carry. Keith Marshall, another freshman, has 264 yards rushing with three touchdowns.

"They've had success early, and they've earned it," Richt said. "They've worked hard."

Aaron Murray isn't far behind Bray's pace. Murray, a junior in his third season starting, has passed for 10 touchdowns with only two interceptions.

"He's playing with a lot of confidence right now," Dooley said of Murray. "He's got a very strong arm. He's got a lot of snaps under his belt. They don't change a lot offensively in what they do. ... He's had a lot of work at getting good at what they do. You can just see him triggering the ball a lot quicker than he ever has. He's more accurate than he's been. That just comes with experience."

Dooley said the Bulldogs are dangerous with their running game and play-action passes.

"They also can spread you out and drop it back," Dooley said. "There's really no weakness in what they're doing right now."

Derek Dooley

This season's matchup features the highest-scoring teams in the SEC. Georgia is averaging 47.5 points per game and Tennessee is at 38.2.

Tennessee (3-1, 0-1 SEC) is equipped to keep pace because of Tyler Bray, who is tied for the NCAA lead with 12 touchdown passes. The Vols also boast top talent at wide receiver with Justin Hunter and Cordarrelle Patterson.

Georgia coach Mark Richt says Bray is "one of the most talented passers that I've seen in a while."

"They have some tremendously skilled receivers," Richt said. "They've got a vertical passing game that I know I envy. We like to throw it down the field, but they can really lay it out there good."

Georgia's attack has good balance. Freshman tailback Todd Gurley has 406 yards rushing and six touchdowns. Gurley is averaging 9.2 yards per started after all the conference commissioners met last week in Chicago.

"There is an ongoing concern some of the conferences have had about AQ, non-AQ, access and those types of issues and in that conversation there was a consensus that we could all imagine a seventh bowl game so there are more access points going forward for all conferences than existed in the past," Scott said.

"In my view, given that there is so much positive about the new system going forward about having a playoff and neutral site championship game, it would be a real shame if all that progress and all that success is clouded by continued discussions about access and haves and have-nots. I'm certainly in favor of creating more access points."

A person with direct knowledge of the plan for the four-team playoff in 2014 told The Associated Press on Wednesday that either a Pac-12 or a Big 12 team likely will be the opponent for the top-rated champion from the Big East, Mountain West, Conference USA, Sun Belt and Mid-American Conference.

Ohio St. is just another rival now for Dantonio

By Noah Trister
Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — For years, Mark Dantonio and Ohio State were on fairly cozy terms.

Dantonio was a defensive coordinator there — a protege of coach Jim Tressel — before moving on and eventually taking over at Michigan State. He grew up an hour from the Buckeyes' home field, and his wife is an Ohio State graduate.

Time s change, though. The Tressel era came to an unceremonious end. Urban Meyer is coaching the Buckeyes now, and for Dantonio, Ohio State is now simply a rival.

"It does make it easier," Dantonio said. "I know Urban, everything. Good guy, all that kind of stuff. It makes it easier when you don't have a real personal attachment because it's tough when you play against your good friends."

The 20th-ranked Spartans host the 14th-ranked Buckeyes on Saturday — a tone-setting Big Ten opener if there ever was one. It will be Meyer's first conference game since taking over at Ohio State, and although the Buckeyes aren't eligible for the Big Ten title, there's a sense they could be the league's best team.

Michigan State, on the other hand, is still eyeing a Rose Bowl berth that narrowly eluded the Spartans the last two seasons. Dantonio's team made quite a statement at Ohio State last year, racking up nine sacks in a 10-7 win. Michigan State (3-1) brings back many of the same defensive standouts from that team, but the Buckeyes (4-0) hope they've improved.

"We made it through our preseason 4-0," Meyer said. "We have a lot of work to do to become a better football team in all three phases. We'd better do it fast because we're facing an excellent team in a tough environment."

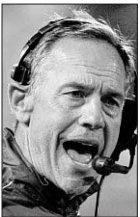

Ohio State's unbeaten start included a win over California, while Michigan State knocked off Boise State in its opener. The Spartans also lost to Notre Dame and weren't sharp in a victory last weekend over Eastern Michigan.

Ohio State's defense is currently ranked last in the Big Ten, but quarterback Braxton Miller has already thrown for seven touchdowns and run for another seven.

With new quarterback Andrew Maxwell taking over and throwing to an inexperienced corps of receivers, Michigan State has leaned heavily on running back Le'Veon Bell, who already has 610 yards on 117 carries.

"Get him before he gets to you," Buckeyes safety Orhian Johnson said. "That's definitely the thing. You definitely want to get to him before he gets started because he's real top-heavy and you know he's going to run downfield. He's got good feet, so you can't just chop at him, but you have to make sure you get up there, you wrap him up and get your boys there for you."

It's hard to say what the outlook is among Michigan State players because they weren't available to the media this week. It's not unusual for the Spartans to close ranks before a big game, and this certainly qualifies.

No. 5 Georgia, Tennessee to match high-scoring attacks

By Charles Odum
Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga. — Derek Dooley has good credentials when it comes to Georgia football history.

As the son of former longtime Georgia coach and athletic director Vince Dooley, Derek Dooley was 12 when the Bulldogs won the 1980 national championship. He kept his allegiance to his father's team until launching his playing career at Virginia.

So when Derek Dooley, now in his third year as Tennessee's coach, seeks to place perspective on the No. 5 Georgia team which plays the Vols on Saturday, it qualifies as an expert opinion.

"They are probably playing as good as I've seen them in a long time," Dooley said.

The Bulldogs (4-0, 2-0 Southeastern Conference) have scored more than 40 points in each of their first four games.

Georgia has also won two straight games in the series, including a 41-14 decision in Athens two years ago and a 20-12 victory at Tennessee last year.

Scott: Pac-12, Big 12 in 7th bowl talks

By Tim Booth
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Pac-12 Commissioner Larry Scott confirmed Thursday night the conference is in preliminary talks with the Big 12 Conference about creating a seventh bowl game that would match a representative from one of the two conferences against the best team from a group of five conferences, including the Big East.

Scott spoke at halftime of Washington's game against No. 8 Stanford. He said the talks that with the Big 12 are in the infant stages and

Advice

Touch is necessary to emotional, physical health

Dear Amy: I am a single, Christian male in my mid-50s. I was molested and raped from the age of 11 to 12 by a man who was a community leader and a family friend.

Though I have struggled with sometimes disabling depression for as long as I can remember, I realize that it is probably a mistake to attribute all of my pain and dysfunction to this unfortunate history.

An antidepressant I have taken for 10 years or so has allowed me to function at home and work, but I am still unable to tolerate the physical touch of another human being.

As you might expect, this has presented a serious obstacle to establishing close relationships, particularly with women. (My last therapist recommended a sexual surrogate, which is not an option.)

Must I resign myself to a solitary life?

— Damaged Goods

Dear Damaged: I am not a clinician, but a sympathetic observer, and I am so sorry for what you have been through.

Professional help is vital. It is possible that you may have misunderstood the purpose of using a sexual surrogate, or the function of such a surrogate. In your case, it would not be for sex but to gradually introduce being touched by another human being.

Touch is a necessity for emotional and physical health. Most touch is not sexual, and it seems logical that you should start with simple, brief and benign experiences involving touch — having a hand or a foot massage, or having your feet washed at church, for instance (this experience can be profound).

You are not consigned to a solitary life as long as you continue to do the hard work of reaching out for answers.

Check out the sexual abuse support group male-survivor.org. This strong network of survivors can refer you to a local or online support group.

Dear Amy: You asked for “worst wedding” stories. Here’s mine. It involves my best friend. The minister was beyond sloshed during the entire ceremony. We were all so embarrassed for her we haven’t mentioned it since.

— Wedding Hangover

Dear Hangover: Reading these “worst wedding” stories is like engaging in group schadenfreude.

Keep dish cloths fresh by rinsing with cold water and laying out after use

Dear Heloise: Is there a way to keep dishcloths clean? They are stained and look yucky even straight from the dryer. Should I just toss them and start with new ones, or can you help me?

— R. Smythe in Pennsylvania

Dear R. Smythe: If the cloths are bleachable, try this: Put 1 gallon of hot water, 1 cup of powdered dishwasher detergent and ¼ cup of household liquid chlorine bleach into the washing machine.

Add the cloths and let the machine agitate for a few minutes, then let them soak in the machine for at least 30 minutes.

Next, add the regular amount of laundry detergent and let the cycle finish. This washing should remove the smell and any stains, too. For non-bleachable dishcloths, just wash them with like items in the washing machine.

Wash dishcloths frequently to keep them clean and smell-free. After using the cloth, rinse in cold water, leave a little bit of soap in it and lay it someplace so it can dry between uses.

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: My husband travels on business and frequently must dress in a suit and tie. He was always forgetting to pack the collar stays for his dress shirts.

He was advised by a friend that good emergency collar stays are the coffee stirrers you find in most coffee shops, hotel restaurants, etc.

Just fold the stirrer to the correct length or cut the stirrer to the desired length.

The stirrers are strong and handy.

— Kathy Smith in Dallas

Dear Heloise: My mother said that her mother told her to go around the house after everyone is in bed and pick up items that are “dragging” — our way of saying not in their right place — and put them up.

Then in the morning, everything is ready to start another day with a lot less work.

Also, when my children were young, they weren’t allowed to go out to play, watch TV, etc., until I checked their rooms to make sure they had made their beds and picked up their things. They turned out to be very neat grown-ups.

— P.M., via email

Dear Heloise: I have so many pairs of earrings, and I have found that by keeping them in plastic ice-cube trays, I am able to keep the pairs together for easy access and loss prevention. Plus the trays are stackable and fit in most dresser drawers.

Small heart valve leak may not need immediate attention, stay in touch with doctor

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 22-year-old man. I had three heart surgeries when I was just a young boy. The doctors said something about a VSD and repairing a heart valve. I haven’t been in touch with my cardiologist for five years because of personal circumstances.

I recently did see a cardiologist, who did some tests and referred me for a TEE, transesophageal echocardiogram. The results say one of my heart valves has a small leak, and I have a very small hole in my heart. Do I need another surgery?

— T.L.

Dear T.L.: A VSD is a ventricular septal defect, a hole in the wall that separates the right ventricle from the left ventricle. Both ventricles are the lower heart chambers.

The right one pumps blood into the lungs for oxygen; the left one pumps oxygenated blood out into the body. VSD often is seen with a leak in the heart’s aortic valve, the valve that keeps blood from rushing back into the heart after it’s been pumped out.

A tee takes pictures from instruments introduced into the esophagus. That gives the best view of the heart structures involved in your heart condition.

A small leak isn’t something that needs immediate attention. It is not causing symptoms. It’s not making you breathless when you are active. The same goes for a very small hole. Neither may give you any trouble. However, you do have to stay in touch with your heart doctor.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am an 84-year-old lady, and my doctor has recommended that I drink one glass of wine in the evening. What are the calories and percentage of alcohol in one glass of red wine or one glass of white?

— R.B.

Dear R.B.: One 12-ounce can of beer, 5 ounces of wine (red or white) and 1.5 ounces of distilled whiskey contain the same amount of alcohol (12 grams), and the calorie load is between 100 and 150. In smaller volumes (i.e., whiskey) the alcohol is more concentrated.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please tell me what you can take for cholesterol instead of the drug Lipitor.

— J.A.

Dear J.A.: Lipitor is one of seven statin drugs. You could try one of the other six. It might not affect you in the same way. Welchol, Colestid and Questuran are from an entirely different family of cholesterol-lowering drugs. You ought to be able to tolerate one of them.

Another group of medicines, not related to statin drugs, includes Trilipix and Tricor.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Horoscope

TODAY’S BIRTHDAY: (Sept. 29). You were meant to be in charge, and you will be in October, sharing your skills with those who can benefit from them the most. A desire for fitness will have you changing core habits in 2013. You’ll be charmed by a feisty character and may decide to make this person a regular companion. Gemini and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 39, 15, 48, 11 and 20.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). With the full moon in your sign, it takes no effort at all for you to come on strong. Do less. Your presence is felt because you don’t try. Instead, you seize or don’t seize the moment according to your feelings.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). Getting what you want can sometimes be like winning second prize. When you don’t get what you want, you gain experience, which is often the best prize there is.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). If you played on a soccer team as a child, you might agree that the teamwork and sportsmanship you learned were far more important than whether you won the game of soccer. Today’s task will be the same.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). You will someday meet the very same person you idolize today. So pick your heroes carefully. Make sure they are worthy of the attention and adoration you freely give.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). The reality you build around yourself has a magical quality. You don’t see it anymore. You’re too close to all you’ve built. Today, though, you’ll see it in another person’s eyes.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You’ll be magnetically attractive to the one whose agenda is in opposition to yours. It’s unavoidable and also quite helpful. You’ll be better for having to convince others of the importance of your mission.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You may not escape the day without criticism. If it comes from someone you love, you’re in luck. The one who keeps after you is hard on you only because he or she sees and believes in the beauty of your potential.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The full moon activates a sense of entitlement in you. But this doesn’t cause you to act spoiled or unreasonable. Instead, you claim what was rightfully yours all along.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Learn the fundamentals. Practice the basics. Much will be accomplished with simple kindness, clean work and fair practice. The more elaborate parts of your deal will never work until the fundamentals are firmly laid.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You still long to make a contribution in a certain realm. Probably you’ve wanted to do this since childhood. You’ll see a way now, as the full moon shines a light on new people and opportunities.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Believe it or not, your enemy is a more important part of your team than your friends and supporters today, as no one will be as motivating. Also, you’ll go out of your way not to become like a bad example.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). As the lunar influence leaves your part of the sky, you may feel misplaced. There is strength in your position, nonetheless. When you’re not where you’re supposed to be, you’ll rely on the courage of your convictions.

Religion

Put complete trust in God as you listen to His plan for your life

How do you know when God is speaking to you? How can you be absolutely sure when God is speaking to you? There are those times when we think He is talking to us when in all reality, it is our own intuition. There are also those times when we know the Lord is speaking to us when we refuse to listen.

How can we truly know when it is the Lord is trying to communicate something to us? I truly believe that the Lord speaks to His people today. I rejoice in the truth that God loves us enough that He talks to us in His own time and in His own way.

We can be sure we are hearing God speak to us if what He is saying is in accordance to His Holy Word. God will never tell us anything that violates His Holy Word.

He gave us the Bible to live and to pattern our lives after. There are people out there who are very critical of The Bible.

They say that it is out of date and can't be trusted. They say that it is not in keeping with modern-day style.

But in all reality, these are just lame excuses that people have for not reading and studying the Word of God. Some people may be bold enough to come out and say that they do not believe it. Instead of following it, they follow their heart.

They let their own conscience be their guide, which is a very dangerous and disastrous way to live life. Why is this? It is because every man is under the dominion of sin.

In First Corinthians 2:14, the Apostle Paul said, "But the natural man receives not the things of the Spiritual of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritual discerned."

What did he mean when he said the natural man? He was talking about the person with an unregenerated heart. The things of God do not make sense to those who are not saved and who do not have the Spirit of God dwelling within them.

The Bible says in Ephesians 2:1 "And you has he quickened, who were died in trespasses and sins." The word "quickened" here means "made alive." Before we were saved, our sins separated us from God, which caused us to be spiritually dead. When a person is spiritually dead, he is insensitive or unresponsive to the things of God.

The Lord Jesus Christ said in John 10:27, "My sheep hears my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." The true Christian knows when the Father is speaking to him/her.

There are all sorts of voices out there competing for our attention, trying to tell us how to act, what to believe and how we should live our lives. The true Christian is attentive and is led by what the Spirit of God tells him and walks in accordance to his will.

Do you listen to the voice of God when He speaks to you or do you just turn a deaf ear to it? He often doesn't speak in an overbearing, powerful way that we hear with our physical ears.

When God speaks to us, it is in the still, small voice as He did with Elijah in I Kings 19 where it says, "And after the earthquake a fire; but the Lord was not in the fire: and after the fire a still small voice" (Verse 12).

In that still, small voice, we find strength and comfort. In the midst of our most darkest hour, we can find peace and assurance to carry on and move forward. When we are troubled and burdened with a load of care, we find hope and confidence to fight any battle that confronts us.

It should not take blinding light or the sounds of blaring trumpets in order for God to get our attention the way He did with Paul on the road to Damascus. We should not have to have a "burning bush experience" like the one He presented to Moses before we recognize that God is trying to tell us something.

How should we respond when God is speaking to us? We should never put Him off, telling Him that we will get back with Him later. We should respond to Him with a willing heart and a determined spirit to do whatever He has for us to do.

The only way we can respond to the God of all creation and the One who made us and gave us life is by saying "Yes, Lord!" We should never allow our desires or world ambitions to get in the way of serving Him or being the kind of person He wants us to be.

The only way we can be truly happy in this life and have peace in our hearts is through true obedience and submission to the will of God. As I am writing these words, I can't help but think of the old, familiar hymn of the church by John Sammis, "Trust And Obey." The chorus to this timeless classic of the church simply says: "Trust and obey, for there's no other way, To be happy in Jesus, but to trust and obey."

We like to plan out our lives. We set goals for ourselves and do our best to attain them. For them most part, this is good. We all need challenges in our lives to bring out the best qualities in us.

But I probably don't have to remind you things don't always work out the way we had hoped. All of us experience setbacks which we had not foreseen. We can't plan for every obstacle that we may have to encounter.

But God has a plan for us that is much greater than we could ever envision for ourselves. He is the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. Unlike us, He can see things that we can't.

He alone knows what the future holds for all of us, and this is the reason we can put our complete trust in Him, knowing that it will work out to our best interest every time.

Until next week — God bless.

Mormon church dedicates temple

The Associated Press

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah – The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has dedicated its newest temple after a month-long open house that drew more than 400,000 visitors.

Mormon church officials say the site dedicated Sunday in Brigham City is the 14th temple in the state and the 139th in the world.

Ceremonies including marriages and baptisms are held at temples, which are open only to church members in good standing. Mormon meetinghouses or chapels are open to anyone who wants to attend a service there.

Report ordered in religious attack

The Associated Press

BAY CITY, Mich. – A Michigan man who authorities say attacked two men because he believed they were Muslims has been ordered to write a report on the history of Hinduism.

Bay County Circuit Judge Joseph Sheeran this week sentenced 26-year-old Delane Bell to two years of probation, with the condition he write the 10-page report.

Sheeran says the men who were attacked are Hindus and Bell needs to educate himself. MLive.com reports Bell says he takes "full responsibility."

No tax, no blessing

German church insists on levy

By Juergen Baetz
Associated Press

BERLIN — The road to heaven is paved with more than good intentions for Germany's 24 million Catholics. If they don't pay their religious taxes, they will be denied sacraments, including weddings, baptisms and funerals.

A decree issued last week by the country's bishops cast a spotlight on the longstanding practice in Germany and a handful of other European countries in which governments tax registered believers and then hand over the money to the religious institutions.

In Germany, Catholics, Protestants and Jews pay a surcharge of up to 9 percent on their income tax bills — or about (euro) 56 ($72) a month for a single person earning a pre-tax monthly salary of about (euro) 3,500 ($4,500).

For religious institutions, struggling to maintain their congregations in a secular society where the Protestant Reformation began 500 years ago, the tax revenues are vital.

The Catholic Church in Germany receives about (euro) 5 billion ($6.5 billion) annually from the surcharge. For Protestants, the total is just above (euro) 4 billion ($5.2 billion). Donations, in turn, represent a far smaller share of the churches' income than in the United States.

With rising prices and economic uncertainty, however, more and more Catholics and Protestants are opting to save their money and declare to tax authorities they are no longer church members, even if they still consider themselves believers.

"I quit the church already in 2007," said Manfred Gonschor, a Munich-based IT-consultant. "It was when I got a bonus payment and realized that I could have paid myself a nice holiday alone on the amount of church tax that I was paying on it."

Gonschor added he was also "really fed up with the institution and its fail-ures."

Such defections have hit the Catholic Church especially hard — it has lost about 181,000 tax-paying members in 2010 and 126,000 a year later, according to official figures.

Protestants, who number about 24 million nationwide, lost 145,000 registered members in Germany in 2010, the most recent year from which figures are available.

Switzerland and Austria also tax Catholic and Protestant church members. In Denmark, the State Lutheran church collects a tax from its members.

Members of Sweden's Lutheran Church pay around 1 percent of their income, collected by the national tax authorities, just as in Finland.

God wants us to talk to Him on regular basis

Q: How often should I pray? I try to pray every day, and I know I ought to, but sometimes I don't get around to it because I'm preoccupied with other things. Maybe that's wrong, but it's the way I am.

Dear P.L.B.: One of the Bible's greatest truths is that God not only exists, but He actually wants to have a personal relationship with us. And prayer is one of the ways He's given us to strengthen that relationship.

In other words, don't look on prayer as a burden or obligation; instead, look on it as a privilege.

Just imagine: The God who created the whole universe wants to welcome you into His presence — and that is exactly what happens when we pray!

Remember: Prayer is possible because God sent His only Son, Jesus Christ, into the world to tear down the barrier that exists between us and God — a barrier caused by our sin.

Because of Christ's death and resurrection for us, the Bible says, "we have gained access by faith into this grace in which we now stand" (Romans 5:2).

Make sure of your commitment to Jesus Christ. Then thank Him that He loves you so much that He wants you to talk with Him through your prayers.

Set aside time to pray every day — but in addition, learn to pray throughout the day, thanking God for the good things He brings into your life. Pray also when you (and others you know) are facing problems or decisions, for you need His help.

"This Day"

Psalms 118:24 states, "This is the day the LORD has made; let us rejoice and be glad in it." I often remind myself of this wonderful statement.

God is the only one in the day-making business. One new day rolls off God's assembly line every twenty-four hours, right on schedule, each one unique. All of them are individually crafted, packaged with grace, and wrapped in love.

I must confess at times I awake to the new day without giving much thought to the fact that it has been designed by God especially for each of us. Stating we are to rejoice and be glad in the new day would suggest God has assured us of his mercy and grace being sufficient to meet the need of what each day brings.

I would not want to suggest that everything happening in your life each day is guaranteed to bring rejoicing. That is probably contrary to the intent of the message this verse brings us. The truth is with the hurts and sorrows many face, few can find reason to rejoice. To deny pain and grief would suggest we might not be thinking reasonably.

As I review this passage of scripture I am reminded that each event of the day passes under the watchful eyes of a loving God who promises to supply our needs. I can rejoice in my day for I am fully aware that Jesus will never leave me, even in my most trying times.

I am of the opinion our attitude has a lot to do with how we see each day. Reality tells me it can be a little tough to see good coming in everything we meet, maybe that is not the intent of this passage of scripture. My attitude always improves when I remember God is always a present help in time of need.

Air Force insiders foresaw F-22 woes

Jet's oxygen system flaws called for adjustments that weren't funded

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press

KADENA AIR BASE, Japan — Years before F-22 pilots began getting dizzy in the cockpit, before one struggled to breathe as he tried to pull out of a fatal crash, before two more went on television to say the plane was so unsafe they refused to fly it, a small circle of Air Force experts knew something was wrong with the prized stealth fighter jet.

Coughing among pilots and fears that contaminants were leaking into their breathing apparatus led the experts to suspect flaws in the oxygen-supply system of the F-22 Raptor, especially in extreme high-altitude conditions in which the $190 million aircraft is without equal. They formed a working group a decade ago to deal with the problem, creating an informal but unique brain trust.

Internal documents and emails obtained by The Associated Press show they proposed a range of solutions by 2005, including adjustments to the flow of oxygen into pilot's masks. But that key recommendation was rejected by military officials reluctant to add costs to a program that was already well over budget.

"This initiative has not been funded," read the minutes of their final meeting in 2007.

Minutes of the working group's meetings, PowerPoint presentations and emails among its members reveal a missed opportunity for the Air Force to improve pilot safety in the 187-plane F-22 fleet before a series of high-profile problems damaged the image of an aircraft that was already being assailed in Congress as too costly. Its production was halted last spring and the aircraft has never been used in combat.

Among the problems reported after the working group's warnings:

- In 2008, pilots began reporting a sharp increase in hypoxia-like problems, forcing the Air Force to finally acknowledge concerns about the F-22's oxygen supply system.
- Two years later, the oxygen system contributed to a fatal crash. Though pilot error ultimately was deemed to be the cause, the fleet was grounded for four months in 2011.

- New restrictions were imposed in May, after two F-22 pilots went on the CBS program "60 Minutes" to express their continued misgivings.

The Air Force says the F-22 is safe to fly — a dozen of the jets began a six-month deployment to Japan in July — but flight restrictions that remain in place will keep it out of the high-altitude situations where pilots' breathing is under the most stress.

One of the working group's proposed fixes, a backup oxygen system, is expected to be in place by the end of the year. And the Air Force, which blamed the oxygen shortage on a faulty valve in the pilots' vests, says a fix to that problem is also in the works. The working group also proposed changes in warning systems to alert pilots to system failures and urged enhanced tracking of potential health hazards to pilots and ground crew caused by the materials used to bolster the aircraft's stealth — two more issues the Air Force investigations would later focus on.

More broadly, the Air Force now concedes that while its own experts were tackling the F-22's issues, it was too aggressive in cutting back on life-support programs intended to ensure pilots' safety. It is now in the process of rebuilding them.

The F-22's gradual return to regular flight operations follows an exhaustive investigation over the past year by the Air Force, NASA, experts from Lockheed Martin, which produces the aircraft, and other industry officials.

But the documents obtained by AP show many of the concerns raised in that investigation had already been outlined by the working group that was formed in 2002, when the fighter was still in its early production and delivery stage.

It called itself RAW-G, for Raptor Aeromedical Working Group, and brought together dozens of experts in life support, avionics, physiology and systems safety, along with F-22 aircrew and maintainers.

The group was founded by members of the F-22 community who were concerned about how the unique demands of the aircraft could affect pilots. The fighter can evade radar and fly faster than sound without using afterburners, capabilities unmatched by any other country. It also flies higher than its predecessors and has a self-contained oxygen generation system to protect pilots from chemical or biological attack.

According to the Air Force, RAW-G was created at the suggestion of Daniel Wyman, then a flight surgeon at Florida's Tyndall Air Force Base, where the first F-22 squadron was being deployed. Wyman is now a brigadier general and the Air Combat Command surgeon general.

By the time RAW-G got going, some pilots were already experiencing a problem called "Raptor cough" — fits of chest pain and coughing dating back to 2000 that stem from the collapse of overworked air sacs in the lungs.

The group concluded that the F-22's Onboard Oxygen Generation System — or OBOGS — was giving pilots too much oxygen, causing the coughing. The more often and higher the pilots flew after being oxygen-saturated, group members believed, the more vulnerable pilots affected by the condition would be to other physiological incidents.

Poll finds third of Americans fear police use of drones

By Joan Lowy
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than a third of Americans worry their privacy will suffer if drones like those used to spy on U.S. enemies overseas become the latest police tool for tracking suspected criminals at home, according to an Associated Press-National Constitution Center poll.

Congress has directed the Federal Aviation Administration to come up with safety regulations that will clear the way for routine domestic use of unmanned aircraft within the next three years. The government is under pressure from a wide range of interests to open U.S. skies to drones. Oil companies want them to monitor pipelines. Environmentalists want them to count sea lions on remote islands. Farmers want them to fly over crops with sensors that can detect which fields are wet and which need watering. They're already being used to help fight forest fires. And the list goes on.

Manufacturers are also keen to cash in on what they expect to be a burgeoning new drone market. Government and commercial drone-related expenditures are forecast to total $89 billion worldwide over the next decade. On the leading edge of that new market are state and local police departments, who say that in many cases drones are cheaper, more practical and more effective than manned aircraft. Most of them would be small drones, generally weighing less than 55 pounds. They could be used, for example, to search for missing children or to scout a location ahead of a SWAT team.

But privacy advocates caution that drones equipped with powerful cameras, including the latest infrared cameras that can "see" through walls, listening devices and other information-gathering technology raise the specter of a surveillance society in which the activities of ordinary citizens are monitored and recorded by the authorities.

Nearly half the public, 44 percent, supports allowing police forces inside the U.S. to use drones to assist police work, but a significant minority — 36 percent — say they "strongly oppose" or "somewhat oppose" police use of drones, according to a survey last month.

When asked if they were concerned that police departments' use of drones for surveillance might cause them to lose privacy, 35 percent of respondents said they were "extremely concerned" or "very concerned." An almost identical share, 36 percent, said they were "not too concerned" or "not concerned at all."

Twenty-four percent fell in the middle, saying they were "somewhat concerned" about a potential loss of personal privacy.

David Eisner, president and CEO of the constitution center in Philadelphia, said he was surprised by the level of support for police use of drones.

"I had assumed that the idea that American police would be using the same technology that our military is using in Afghanistan would garner an almost hysterical response," Eisner said. Support for drone use "shows that people are feeling less physically secure than they'd like to because they are willing to accept fairly extreme police action to improve that security."

One poll respondent who said he has deep reservations about police use of drones was Tim Johnson, 55, a Houston real estate agent. He said he fears the data they gather will be misused, especially by other government agencies.

Pointing to the growing use of traffic cameras and the Google's mapping programs, Johnson said he sees police use of drones as an extension of technology trends that are already eroding privacy.

"I Googled my house," Johnson said. "There's my car sitting in the driveway — you can see the license plate number. And my living room picture window, you can see right into my living room. You can see my pictures on the wall. If I had been standing there in my underwear you could see me in my underwear." Google says it tries to ensure privacy by blurring parts of images in its Street View feature.

"This information — there is just too much of it," Johnson said. "I don't support any of it."

But Sheana Buchanan, 49, of Apple Valley, Calif., said she had no qualms about police using drones.

"I figure if you're doing something wrong, then you should be concerned about it," Buchanan said. "But if you're a law-abiding citizen, if you're concerned about safety ... and it's going to help catch the bad guys, have at it."

There was a gender gap in the poll, with men were more concerned about a loss of privacy if police start using drones than women — 40 percent to 30 percent. There was an even wider gap between white and black respondents, with 48 percent of blacks strongly concerned about a loss of privacy compared to 32 percent of whites.

BEST BETS

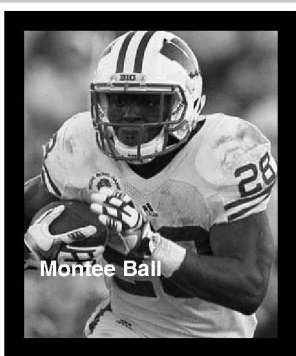

7 p.m. on 25 College Football

The Wisconsin Badgers visit the Nebraska Cornhuskers at Memorial Stadium in Lincoln for a prime-time Big Ten matchup. The Badgers, coming off their second straight conference title, boast a Heisman candidate in running back Montee Ball. Last year, the Badgers gave the Huskers a rude welcome to the Big Ten, defeating them 48-17 in Madison. Huskers QB Taylor Martinez hopes to play better than his three-interception output against the Badgers in 2011.

7 p.m. on 11

Movie: The Book of Eli

Denzel Washington teams with sibling filmmakers Albert and Allen Hughes ("Menace II Society") to put twists on the premise of surviving in a post-apocalyptic world in this moody drama. Washington plays the title character, a loner who possesses a book holding the keys to the continuation of mankind ... and guarding the tome in a time of rampant unrest proves quite a challenge. Gary Oldman plays the main nemesis; Mila Kunis and Jennifer Beals also appear.

Montee Ball

7 p.m. on 1A

Movie: Tombstone

Wyatt Earp (Kurt Russell) gets out of Dodge and attempts to settle down in Tombstone, Ariz., with his brothers (Sam Elliott, Bill Paxton) and buddy Doc Holliday (Val Kilmer). But just because it's called Tombstone doesn't mean it's dead. Wyatt can't hang up his six-shooters until he takes care of the outlaw gang that's stirring up trouble. Powers Boothe, Charlton Heston, Jason Priestley and Dana Delany also star in this 1993 adaptation of the O.K. Corral story.

7 p.m. on 13

Movie: The Sitter

Jonah Hill was a recent Oscar nominee for "Moneyball," but the more typical brand of movie he's known for is represented by this comedy. As the title suggests, he plays a suspended student-turned-baby sitter, and one who buys himself a heap of trouble when he tries to meet up with his girlfriend at the same time he's on the job. Ari Graynor and Sam Rockwell ("Conviction") also appear.

8 p.m. on 53

Movie: Lake Placid 4: The Final Chapter

Some installments in this horror franchise about man-eating crocodiles are so bad they're good. Others are just plain bad. You be the judge of this fourth entry. Robert Englund, the artist formerly known as Freddy Krueger, stars as a poacher who goes up against the crocs. Yancy Butler returns from the third film, and Elisabeth Rohm ("Law & Order") also appears.

9 p.m. on 60

Demetri Martin. Standup Comedian.

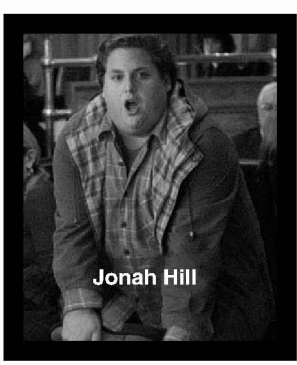

In his second stand-up special, the "Taking Woodstock" star and former host of "Important Things With Demetri Martin" offers his observations on the things we do, say and believe, accompanied by his easel, where he produces his trademark charts, diagrams and illustrations to make his points. The special was taped at the Skirball Center for the Performing Arts in New York.

9:25 p.m. on 63

Movie: Conan the Barbarian

Arnold Schwarzenegger began his ride to Hollywood's A-list in the title role of this 1982 adventure based on the pulp-magazine stories of Robert E. Howard. Orphaned and enslaved as a child, he grows up big, strong and out for revenge against his parents' killer: the snake-worshipping sorcerer Thulsa Doom (James Earl Jones), who belongs in the top 10 when the American Film Institute gets around to doing the "100 Greatest Character Names."

Jonah Hill

9:30 p.m. on 1

Movie: American Gangster

Re-teaming with "Gladiator" director Ridley Scott, Russell Crowe yields a highly notable addition to the canon of crime films, though Denzel Washington gets the flashier role as a drug kingpin importing heroin straight from its Asian source. Crowe plays the New York police detective determined to help federal agents bring down the illegal empire; both stars are excellent in the fact-inspired drama that also features Chiwetel Ejiofor, Josh Brolin and Ruby Dee.

10 p.m. on 7

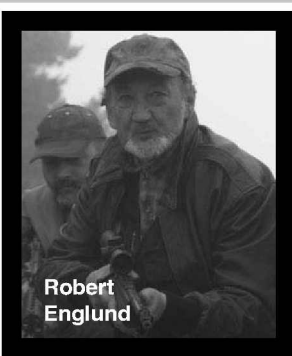

Bones

Hats off to the punster who titled this episode, "The Truth in the Lie." The fact that Brennan's (Emily Deschanel) latest body was found in a tub of caustic liquid isn't the only thing making this case harder to solve than most. There are at least three people with possible motives for wanting him dead. David Boreanaz, Michaela Conlin and T.J. Thayne also star.

10 p.m. on 18

Movie: Hang 'Em High

After starring in a run of spaghetti Westerns, Clint Eastwood came home and made this pasta-free tale of frontier justice. He plays a former lawman who's almost killed by a lynch mob for a crime he didn't commit. Encouraged by a judge and armed with a marshal's badge, he sets out to even the score with his would-be executioners. Inger Stevens, Ed Begley and Pat Hingle also star in the 1968 Western.

10 p.m. on 10

NCIS

Secrets arise when Joann Fielding (guest star Gena Rowlands), Gibbs' (Mark Harmon) former mother-in-law, becomes a witness in a murder investigation, forcing Gibbs to revisit his unhappy past in "Mother's Day." Rena Sofer, Adam Kaufman, Bryce Johnson and Leann Hunley also guest star.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Saturday, Sept. 29, the 273rd day of 2012. There are 93 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 29, 1862, Prussia's newly appointed minister-president, Otto von Bismarck, delivered a speech to the country's parliament in which he declared the issue of German unification would be decided "not through speeches and majority decisions" but by "iron and blood (Eisen und Blut)." (Some references give the date of this speech as Sept. 30, 1862.)

On this date:

In 1907, the foundation stone was laid for the Washington National Cathedral, which wasn't fully completed until this date in 1990.

In 1962, the musical "My Fair Lady" closed on Broadway after 2,717 performances.

In 1978, Pope John Paul I was found dead in his Vatican apartment just over a month after becoming head of the Roman Catholic Church.

In 1982, Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules laced with cyanide claimed the first of seven victims in the Chicago area. (To date, the case remains unsolved.)

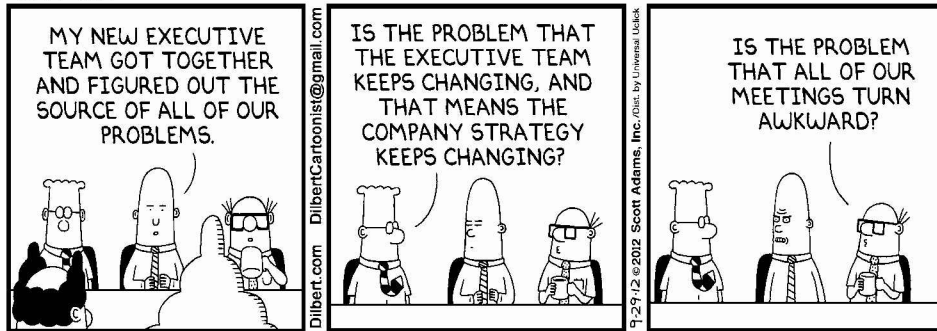

Five years ago: Actress Lois Maxwell, who'd starred as Miss Mon-penny in 14 James Bond movies, died in Fremantle, Australia, at age 80.

One year ago: Phillip Matthew Hannan, the former New Orleans archbishop who eulogized President John F. Kennedy and who served more than three decades as the popular leader of his Roman Catholic archdiocese, died on the 47th anniversary of his ordination.

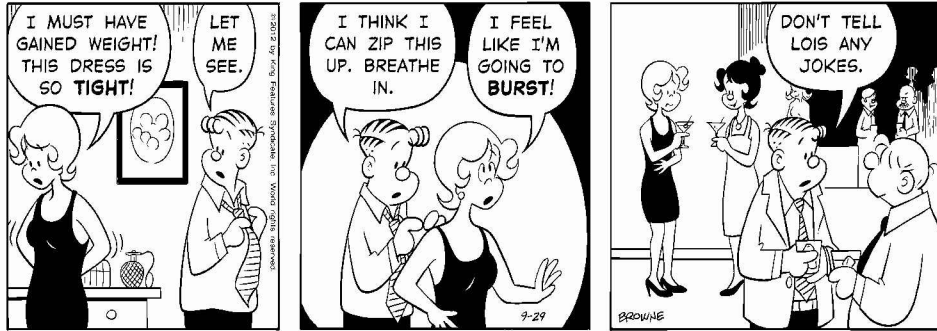

Think about it

"Wars teach us not to love our enemies, but to hate our allies." — W.L. George, English writer (1882-1926).
